REIGN OF FRANCIS JOSEPH ACTUALLY LONGEST IN RECORDED HISTORY

EMPEROR FRANCIS JOSEPH

(Francis Joseph I, emperor of Austria, apostolic king of Hungary, king of Bohemia, of Croatia, of Galicia, etc., was born Aug. 18, 1830, and ascended the throne Dec. 2, 1848. In succession to his uncle, Emperor Ferdinand I, who abdicated on that date. His reign of sixty-seven years is one of the longest in history, being exceeded only, it is believed, by that of Louis XIV. of France, who sat on the throne seventy-two years. But Louis was a child of five when he ascended the throne, whereas Francis Joseph had attained the comparatively mature age of eighteen, so in reality Francis Joseph has had the longest actual reign. The heir to his throne is Charles Francis Joseph, nephew of the murdered Archduke Francis Ferdinand, who was the nephew of Francis Joseph.)

NOTICE
I. J. LINDLEY GREEN, announce my candidacy for election to the office of City Attorney at the coming City Election.

I was City Attorney for the Town of Seward during the year ending in April, 1915. While City Attorney I gave written opinions on all important legal questions involving the rights of the city. I gave a written opinion in regard to every important feature of all proposed franchises stating the legal effect of every point involved in such proposed franchise. These written opinions were filed with the Municipal Clerk and became public documents open to the inspection of the public, thereby enabling both the Council and the Public to know where they were.

During my term the question of electric lights for our Public Schools became an acute issue, and the lights were furnished, and a flood of light streamed forth from our Public Schools and across the placid waters of Resurrection Bay, proclaiming to the world that Seward possessed an institution of learning. These lights were furnished at a reasonable rate.

This year our public schools are shrouded in darkness through the short dark days of winter. I say, "Let there be light!" I stand squarely on my record made while in the office of City Attorney. I am an independent candidate.

Most Respectfully
J. LINDLEY GREEN.

LOST LEGION OF GALLIPOLI

GREATEST MYSTERY OF WAR
STILL PUZZLES PEOPLE OF GREAT BRITAIN.

By WILBUR S. FOREST
(Special to Gateway by United Press)
LONDON, Feb. 22.—"Nothing more was ever heard of them. They charged into the forest and were lost to sight and sound. Not one of them ever came back."—Sir Ian Hamilton's report.

It is the talk of England, the greatest mystery of the war, the charge of the Fifth Norfolk, the King's own servants, at Anafarta. The story of how these 260 "ardent souls" charged on through the village of Anafarta and completely vanished into the "forest of death" beyond, is history that some day may take its place besides that of the immortal tale of Balaklava.

The "Lost Legion," it is called today, but until the war is over the fate of the men who went to battle from the King's Sandringham estates cannot be told. The king personally has instituted every possible inquiry. The American embassy in Constantinople has asked the Turkish government. The forest through which the "Lost Legion" swept on in Gallipoli has been searched time and time again.

There have been found no bodies, no graves, no sign, except two small pocketbooks, the property of Captain William Beck, who commanded the Legion. Captain Beck is missing with all of his command.

Meantime scores of cottage homes in the royal Sandringham estates of West Norfolk are in mourning. Wives, sweethearts and mothers are wearing crepe, but despite all this there is ever the hope that some day the boys will come marching home. "Perhaps they are prisoners of the Turks; perhaps they weren't killed at all, and perhaps"—its the hope against hope of the women of West Norfolk.

The "Lost Legion" received its baptism of fire before it set foot on Turkish soil. It arrived off Sulva Bay August 10th aboard the palatial Aquitania from England. Turkish machine guns and artillery ploughed the water about them as they were being transported to shore, where they landed safely and dug themselves in. Two days later the men were ordered to clear the Turks from Anafarta.

Colonel Beauchamp was at their head with Captain Beck. The attack developed rapidly. Enflamed by Turkish fire, many of them dropped wounded or dead, but the others swept on through the village and into oblivion.

News has filtered through via Switzerland that thirteen of those who charged through Anafarta are prisoners in Constantinople. But it has developed that these men fell wounded before the mysterious darkness of the forest was reached. Long before Gallipoli was evacuated the Mystery Forest was retaken by the Turks. This event sealed the puzzle tighter than ever.

Among those who charged with Captain Beck, organizer of the Legion and for twenty years the King's estate agent, were the King's plumber, gardner, gamekeeper, woodman, golf foreman and scores of men in lesser positions. Like their fathers and their fathers' fathers they had been born royal servants.

Every Sunday in all the parish churches now prayers are said for the safe return of the missing ones. In every cottage is a recent message from the king:

"I heartily sympathize with you who are left in suspense but I am proud that the battalion fought so splendidly."
