

ALASKANS URGED TO MAKE EXHIBIT

Alaskan newspapers are giving much favorable comment on the invitation issued by J. L. McPherson, manager of the Alaska bureau of the Chamber of Commerce for Alaska, to participate in the Northwest Land Products exposition, to be held in Seattle October 4 to 14, and the most complete display of Alaskan products ever assembled is expected to result from the interest being shown.

The Anchorage Daily Times, the Seward Gateway, the Daily Alaskan, of Skagway; the Daily Alaska Dispatch, of Juneau, and the Ketchikan Progressive Miner are among the Alaskan newspapers whose editorial comments on the proposed Alaskan exhibit have been received by the bureau. Under the heading, "Strong on Exposition," the Ketchikan Progressive Miner says:

"The Seattle people are great on exposition." Of that there need not be any doubt, because they have proven themselves so. They are bound to expose. It's a good thing, too, as an exposition is attractive, therefore brings in the curious, among whom are likely to be found some who will stick to the exposition's vicinity and increase the population of Seattle; and that is all the people of that enterprising city want—population. With a large number of people, trade increases and prosperity follows—and there you are. Being wise to the value of expositions, they have planned to expose some more in the fall, an announcement of which appeared in yesterday's issue.

"Alaskans should take advantage of the offer made by the Alaska bureau of the Chamber of Commerce and send exhibits. The first part of October is the right time for garden truck and mineral exhibits. At that time whatever our gardens have produced is in. Likewise the miners are about ready to return to their winter quarters. If we want to settle the country we should expose to the world what we can get out of the country, and since the opportunity is offered by all means let us take it and expose. Let the gardeners and miners join with the exhibitors of the state. We need not be ashamed of what we grow. Products from Alaska compare favorably with any of the Western states. Besides, we may acquire the habit of exposing, an attractive element in itself, and as such well worth cultivating. Particularly in Alaska, where we have so much more to expose than we have to hide, having in mind the size of the country. From that we can see an opportunity ahead and to give credit where credit is due, we must say that the Seattle people are trying to help us, even though by doing so they help themselves."

The Anchorage Daily Times says: "The Seattle bureau of the Chamber of Commerce has been assigned the direction of an exhibit of Alaska's resources at the Northwest Land Products exposition to be held in Seattle on October 4 to 14, and Manager J. L. McPherson has written Anchorage to secure a comprehensive exhibit of the mining, agricultural and other resources of this section. This affords an opportunity that should be embraced of presenting a display that will in part tell of Alaska's great wealth.

"Here is a chance for a little publicity that should not be overlooked. The steamship companies have generously agreed to furnish free transportation for all exhibits, and at the close of the exposition the Alaska bureau would like to have the use of the exhibit for permanent display in its rooms. The Anchorage Chamber of Commerce should get busy at once, in order that this section may be properly represented and our resources and activities shown."—Seattle P. I.
