WORKING ON SNAKE RIVER CHANNEL

A crew of four men, under supervision of the Alaska Road Commission, is working on the Snake River channel, making ready for the spring break-up. Beginning at the outer edge of the jetty a trench will be cut and dynamited and so direct the running water into a course that will relieve pressure against any particular section of the jetty walls. At the present time the water is flowing above the jetty but experience has taught the department that precaution is necessary and should be exercised in time before danger becomes imminent.

SPRING HOT HOUSE GARDENERS BUSY

Throughout the city numerous in-door gardens are beginning to appear and lettuce is already sufficiently developed to afford some toothsome salads. Frank Kiesele is one of the first to get results, his garden producing a generous supply daily.

Window flower gardens are blooming with a variety of blossoms that in truth spell spring and help one to forget the dismal days of the long winter.

MOSQUITO FLEET ACTIVITIES ON SNAKE RIVER

With twelve boats of the Nome mosquito fleet beached in winter quarters the advent of spring will witness much activity. At the present time very little work is being done on the boats due to adverse weather conditions, however the Jewel Guard, White Mountain and Vix are being repaired by their owners. Harry Ewart has purchased the Jewel Guard and with his boat Vix will maintain a coast service from Nome to Solomon and other points.

Andy Peterson has been working on his new boat since last summer and will be ready for launching as soon as ice conditions permit.

The White Mountain is receiving a general overhauling and a new skag hull.

The Jewel Guard, with a new coat of paint, is ready for summer.

Water on Dry Creek is beginning to appear and at the junction of Dry creek and Snake river. There is not sufficient water on the river to enable the Fredolf Gek to be righted, at the present this boat casts to the North and is fastened with cable to protect her.
