nothing worse than the smell of a dead fish. A good fish should never smell at all, nor even give off any scent. Men who have been in the business for a long time always know by the smell what the fish are. So I went to the market to buy a good fish.

It was a fine day, for the sun was shining and the air was warm. There were many people in the market, and I saw many fine fish. I chose one that looked fresh and went to the seller. He was a kind old gentleman, and he looked at the fish and said.

"This is a good fish, sir. It is fresh and will make a fine meal."

I bought the fish and went home, thinking how pleasant it would be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in the market for a long time, and I went back there again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even better than the first. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would be to have a good meal this time.

The next day I went back to the market to buy another fish. I found one that looked even better than the first two. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in the market for a long time, and I went back there
again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even
home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

The next day I went back to the market to buy another fish. I found one that looked even better than the first three. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in
again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even better than the first four. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

The next day I went back to the market to buy another fish. I found one that looked even better than the first five. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in
again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even better than the first six. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

The next day I went back to the market to buy another fish. I found one that looked even better than the first seven. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in
again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even better than the first eight. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

The next day I went back to the market to buy another fish. I found one that looked even better than the first nine. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would
be to have a good meal.

Then I remembered that I had not been in
again to see if I could find a better fish.

This time I found a fish that looked even better than the first ten. I bought it and went home again, thinking how much better it would be to have a good meal.
