President Wilson perhaps knew better than anyone lese that his request that no public discussion of the League of Nations plan be held in the senate until his arrival and explanation of the plan would be in vain. A senator can no more keep from talking than a razorback can be kept out of a cornfield by a rail fence. The more momentous the subject and the more delicate the situation, the surer it is that it will be flaunted to the four winds with all the loose and vicious statements of a backfence gossiping tournament. Somebody ought to induce Mr. Maxim to construct one of his famous silencers for the human mug, and then make it one of the well-known "perquisites of of the United States."
