SHIPS ENCROACH THREE MILE LIMIT

UNDUE ACTIVITY OF FOREIGN WARSHIPS HOVERING OFF VIRGINIA CAPES.

Captain of the William P. Frye Re-asserts That the Prinz Eitel Will Not Attempt to Go to Sea.

Newport News, Va., March 29.—With the battleship Alabama due in Hampton Roads early tomorrow under orders from the Washington government to enforce neutrality and the German converted cruiser Prinz Eitel Friedrich still moored here with steam up, uncertainty regarding the disposition of the German sea raider tonight was expected to be dispelled before many hours.

Although rumor persists that the commander of the Prinz Eitel desires to be towed to New York for internment, keeping within the three-mile limit to prevent attack from British and French warships, verification of the report has been impossible.

Captain Kiehne, master of the American bark William P. Frye, which was sunk in the South Atlantic last January by the German sea raider, today visited Captain Thierichens aboard the Prinz Eitel Friedrich. Captain Kiehne had with him his wife and a party of women friends.

"What did I tell you when I left the Prinz Eitel a few weeks ago?" Captain Kiehne declared when asked what he thought Commander Thierichens intended to do.

The American captain was reminded that he emphatically had declared the Prinz Eitel never would leave until the European war was over.

"Well," Captain Kiehne replied, "I have nothing to add to that statement now."

Reports are persistent here that the ordering of the Alabama to Hampton Roads was because of undue activity on the part of foreign warships which have been hovering off the Virginia capes in wait for the Prinz Eitel. The order to the Alabama was given at Washington Saturday night. On Friday night the lights on Fort Monroe and Fort Wool were kept blazing for many hours illuminating the waters of Hampton Roads. In addition to this the torpedo boat Barney sailed far out toward the capes and signals were exchanged between the forts and the torpedo boat.

Reason for this vigilance on the part of the military and naval forces here was declared tonight to be based on a report that one of the British warships on Thursday night passed inside the Virginia capes while two others stood within the three-mile limit outside. Reports from several sources are to the effect that the foreign warship which came in the capes ventured in almost off Thimble Shoals light.

The foreign warships now reported off the capes are the British Suffolk, Berwick and Corona and an unidentified French vessel.

As to the time limit for the Eitel to remain here without being interned, officials still remain silent. Expiration of the time is variously estimated as between Tuesday and Thursday nights.

COLONEL LOTT DEAD.

Was the Original Promoter of the Hot Springs Western Railroad.

Houston, Texas, March 29.—Colonel Uriah Lott, aged 73 years, a resident for more than a score of years of Brownsville, and the builder of three of the principal railroads of southwest Texas, died tonight in Kingsville after an illness of two weeks' duration. Colonel Lott 28 years ago, practically penniless, tossed up a dollar and said:

"If it comes heads I am going to build a railroad from San Antonio to Corpus Christi."

The flip of the coin was as he had called it and he built the San Antonio and Aransas Pass railroad.

DEFENDANTS TESTIFY IN ELECTION FRAUD CASES

Deny Evidence Produced Against Them by the Government.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 29.—Defendants in the Terre Haute election fraud case here today continued to deny the evidence produced against them by the government. Two more defendants—Andrew (Tip) O'Brien and Edward Driscoll, assistant city engineer and secretary of the democratic county committee, made their denial at the afternoon session. Seven defendants have testified so far.

O'Brien denied helping rush repeaters through the challengers and that Sheriff Dennis Shea, a defendant, was in O'Donnell's saloon paying the repeaters as charged by the government. He also said he did not see any automobile loads of repeaters arrive at the saloons where he said he worked as a bartender. In reply to a question by Judge Anderson, the defendant said he did not know it was unlawful to sell liquor on election day.

A general denial also was made by Driscoll. He asserted that he did not pay any repeaters in his precinct and that he knew nothing of fraudulent registrations. On cross examination it was brought out that he continued to draw his pay from the city, although he worked in democratic headquarters more than a month of the time he was on the city pay roll.

"STRENUOUSNESS" IS THE KEYNOTE

HORSES AT 101 RANCH SHOW DO NOT RUN IN RING, THEREFORE SPEED IS NECESSARY.

Gives the Dash and Go to the Performance Which Typifies the Outdoor Life on the Ranches of the Southwest.

Strenuousness, it is announced, is the keynote of Miller Bros. & Arlington's 101 Ranch Wild West show, which will renew its acquaintance with this city, Saturday, April 10. In the 101 Ranch show, it is declared, it is not necessary for the horses to run in a ring as in the circus, for the arena is an unobstructed one and it is possible for them to run at breakneck speed. This gives a "dash and go" to the performance that is impossible with any other form of tent entertainment.

The 101 Ranch—just as Wild West shows have always been—is pre-eminently a horse show; but this management has the advantage of owning a great 101,000-acre ranch at Bliss, Oklahoma, where the horses are permitted to run at large all winter, absorbing the wildness and spirit which give such zest to the exhibition. One of the most exciting features of the performance is the broncho-busting, and this is insured by the fact that at least fifty absolutely wild horses are always kept with the show. When any of these horses show signs of becoming "broken" they are returned to the ranch and replaced by other "wild" horses.

The daredevil riding in the show is not confined, it is declared, to the cowpunchers, although they are credited with performing many feats of horsemanship that are both thrilling and unusual. Some of the most sensational riding is done by the cowgirls—in fact, they are credited with doing stunts in roughriding that would stump the average cowboy. The Mexicans and Cossacks, who have a peculiar interest for the public at this time, also accomplish feats of roughriding that stir the blood, and the Indians perform strenuous stunts that create enthusiasm.

This is merely a suggestion of the strenuousness of the 101 Ranch exhibition. As a matter of fact, those who are familiar with this characteristic western exhibition declare that there is never a dull moment in the performance and that strenuousness is a mild term to apply to the sensational feats offered by the cowboys, cowgirls and other rough riders with the show. All the 101 Ranch people, it is announced, will appear in the picturesque parade that inaugurates Wild West Day.

MINE SWEEPING STORY IS TOLD

SOME OF THE DIFFICULTIES ENCOUNTERED WHILE SEARCHING FOR EXPLOSIVES.

Little Talk Among the Workers on the Trawlers Is Indulged While the Work is Progressing at Sea.

London, March 29.—A young American who recently signed for adventurous service as a member of the crew of a mine sweeper, sends the following account of one of his trips out into the North Sea:

"Order: You will proceed at once to — and will sweep the area marked on the accompanying chart." This was the order which sent us hammering into the head seas of a lively wind on a bitterly cold Sunday morning at 4 o'clock. Probably few of us on the staggering trawler at that hour paused to reflect that the duty of sweeping the sea has been imposed upon us by a 'discovery' made in the Far East, when Japan and Russia entered upon costly tests of modern naval fighting equipment to the benefit of keenly interested spectators. That discovery was the offensive value of the submarine mine. Japan led the way in the matter, but Russia, once awakened, followed with such efficiency that at the final balance it was found that Japan had lost ten warships through mines and Russia fourteen. The mines had done practically as much harm to the respective navies as the ships had been able to inflict upon each other.

"Therefore it was that we were plunged into a snowstorm to collect, if possible, any free mines which the gale might have swept into the track of shipping. It takes a tight vessel to survive the welter and smother which rise so quickly in these waters. In the winter months, especially, the work goes on amid conditions of great severity, and our ships frequently keep the sea as mine sweepers when as trawlers they would flee to the shelter of their harbors.

"Our ship is one of the best of her staunch type, and she heeled along wonderfully on that Sunday morning. Somewhere in the darkness to starboard there showed through the whirling snow the lights of another vessel running on the same course as ourselves, and at the same time the dawn came up and the sea began to be kin to us, and the sun held once made clear that in any case we were sweeping partner. It was a curious respect for the mine sweeper that made us hold our knowledge quite well. At that moment her plunging bow cut a mine and then there was a vacancy at her end of the draught and vacancies in little cottages on the isles.

"Our partner was an old friend and knew the work. Arrived at the appointed area, the little vessels ran close in and the gear was linked up. It was hard work, even for trawlers. That marked the beginning of the day. The little vessels separated, found their distance to a nicety in the teeth of the wind and started off. The whole operation was carried through with scarcely a word uttered, and the long day's work was under way. Hour after hour, through a succession of rain, hail and snow, careful drag was kept. If there were frozen feet in the trenches that day, there were also frozen hands on the seas.

"Fifteen hours of drenching and buffeting were our portion that day. The vessel with the pull of the tackle and the drive of her engines keeping her down like a half-tide rock, was never clear of the sweeping seas. Then, slap, crash, swish—they came over her bows and swirled about the deck, never ceasing their constant assault.

"When the snow passed, there was a glimpse of the sun. Then the wind backed against the sun, and came down upon us in wild gusts, icy cold. As the afternoon wore on the cold increased, and just before nightfall came a strange lull which let in a biting frost.

"The hardy fellows on board were stiff and numb before the day was done, and when the gear was slipped and shipped nobody was sorry.

"The disposal of the mines recovered depends upon their character and the circumstances of their recovery. Frequently our gunners explode them by firing into them from the deck. The mine sweepers have won recharge of using the mails in an attempt to defraud, today went before United States District Attorney H. Snowden Marshall and swore that she had made an "honest mistake."

The man who associated with, she told the government officials, was Oliver Osborne. Detectives were engaged tonight in checking up that part of Miss Tanzer's statement which Mr. Marshall declared to be "unbelievable."

Miss Tanzer told of some of the things which had transpired between herself and her former counsel, Slade and Slade. Mr. Marshall said that it would be prejudicial to the ends of justice to divulge this part of Miss Tanzer's statement at this time. Speaking tonight of the examination of Miss Tanzer, Mr. Marshall said:

"As for the reasons given by Miss Tanzer for believing that James W. Osborne and Oliver Osborne were the same, her statements are under investigation, and nothing further can be said at this time. As for the reason she stated for deciding that James W. Osborne was not the same as Oliver Osborne, she claimed that she believed that James W. Osborne was the man until after the hearing before United States Commissioner Houghton."
