

Only the Children Are Enjoying This Work

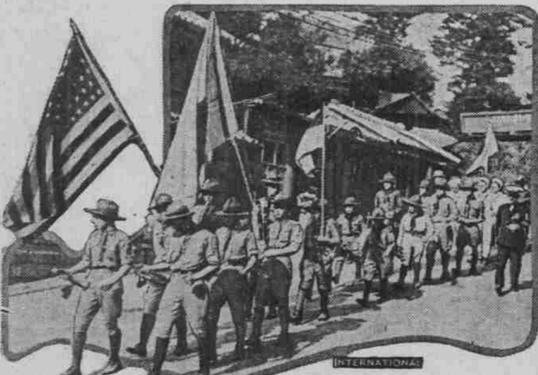

Hauling hay for the stock is no easy job now in Cowlitz county, Washington, where floods have inundated farms for miles and miles. So while watering the stock is easy, feeding it is something of a problem. But farmers don't hesitate—they get there, as this chap is doing, half a load at a time.

Regaining the International Polo Cup

Longest of Suspension Bridges

There have been many women exhibitors at the Royal academy, but in the whole of its history there have been only two women royal academicians. They were Mary Moser and the famous Angelica Kauffman.

MASCOT OF SENATORS

COMPLETING HER TRIP

Miss Zonala Vitkowski, the pretty Russian girl shown here, has reached San Francisco on her journey around the world, begun before the outbreak of the war. Miss Vitkowski's family, headed by her father, a wealthy Petrograd business man, was in Japan on the way around the world when the war broke out. All their possessions were seized by the Bolsheviks in the revolution and now the Vitkowski's live on an Australian estate, where for some time past the girl has been amusing herself by hunting kangaroos. But even that exciting sport palled and now she is finishing the circumnavigation started more than seven years ago.

Presidents Who Served Two Terms. The first president to serve eight years was Jefferson, who was followed in turn by Madison and Monroe, eight years each. Then came John Quincy Adams, who had one term only. He was followed by Jackson with two full terms, ending in 1837. Then came a break of 40 years, until 1877, before President Grant retired after eight years' occupancy of the White House. Cleveland served eight years, 1885-89 and 1893-97, but his two terms were interrupted by that of Benjamin Harrison, 1889-93.

"There Is Nothing So Destructive of Business as Is Uncertainty"

By HERBERT C. HOOVER, Secretary of Commerce

The relation of trade associations and trade institutes to the anti-trust laws has been discussed at great length in the administration. Of the many thousands of such organizations there is a small minority who have degenerated into ways that make for restraint of trade. All are agreed that the purposes and actions of the vast majority of national associations are a constructive contribution to public welfare.

Many of them collect information as to production, stocks of raw and other material, percentage of industry in active operation, total orders in hand—all of which when available to the public contribute both to stability and increasing efficiency of industry and to protection of both the smaller manufacturer and the consumer.

A smaller number of such associations have been engaged in the collection of data on the prices for the exclusive use of their members. Some of these associations have been charged with delimiting areas of commodity distribution among their members and other misuse of information. Whether these latter practices constitute a violation of the anti-trust laws must be determined by the courts, and this the attorney general is proceeding to find out.

All this raises anew the question of the authority of the federal trade commission. The original conception of the commission was that it should, among other things, advise business men what constituted a violation of the restraint of trade laws, but these powers were struck out in the course of actual legislation.

It seems to me that seven years' experience with the commission should now enable a reconsideration of its powers with a view to giving it a more constructive function, subject, say, to review by the attorney general, by which it could remove the uncertainties from the minds of business men as to the line between the field of co-operation and promotion of production and trade and the field of practices against public interest. There is nothing so destructive of business as is uncertainty.

Value of Public Playgrounds to Young Can Hardly Be Overestimated

By GEORGE G. LEE, San Francisco

The value of public playgrounds can hardly be overestimated and the movement to increase the number of recreational centers for children is spreading throughout the country. There are now more than 4,000 playgrounds and recreational centers in the country, and they are helping boys and girls to become athletic. The effect they have in keeping boys out of trouble with the police is one of the most important features of the established playgrounds.

The chief of police of San Francisco believes that the establishment of neighborhood recreation centers is a constructive measure toward suppressing the crime wave, for it has been found that schoolboys have been involved in many crimes recently. He has asked that the playground system be extended on the ground that without a proper place to play boys with leisure time on their hands are likely to get into trouble.

There are likewise fewer street accidents during the season when the playgrounds are used. The playground directors have discovered that summer activities on the playgrounds have practically eliminated all swearing, cheating and stealing among the children. They note with satisfaction that the spirit of fair play has put the playground bully where he belongs and teach the more timid self-reliance. It is invariably the case with children who use the playgrounds that they gain in weight and in appetite.

An Aroused Public Opinion the Best Preventive of Forest Fires

By ROGER W. TOLL, Colorado Mountain Club

The campaign against forest fires is essentially one of publicity and education. When all of the people recognize the needless destruction of our natural resources by preventable forest fires, every individual will exercise the care necessary to prevent such fires.

To check and extinguish a forest fire, once it has a head start, is a difficult matter, but to prevent the start of such a fire is extremely simple. During the past five years, the campers in the United States have been responsible for more than 20,000 forest fires. Greater care in completely extinguishing camp fires and less carelessness with cigars, cigarettes and matches, will prevent the tremendous loss due to these causes.

An aroused public opinion is a most efficient remedy and will greatly decrease the necessity for the detection and punishment of the individuals who may continue to endanger the safety of our public welfare and our valuable heritage of timber resources.

A Question That's Intrigued Savants of All Times and All Places

By MRS. F. X. PHINNELL, Cambridge, Mass.

A question that has intrigued savants of all times and places is "Do fat women make the best wives, and if so, why?"

A true answer to that would be of inestimable importance. It would rob matrimony of its gamble, guarantee happiness to prospective benedicts, and shatter the silly modern prejudice against obesity. Undoubtedly the answer is affirmative.

Since the dawn of history, as shown by the clay tablets lately excavated at Nippur, the well rounded woman has been noteworthy for affection, good nature, disinclination to worry, and taste and ability in preparing food. She is easy-going, restful. She doesn't nag and fret like her thin sisters. In a word, she is comfortable.

Therefore my advice to young men is: Fall in love with a stout woman. The false vivacity, the hectic excitement of the slim girl won't last. Fat and good cooking will. The fleshy girl will cheer your home, smooth your path, and lengthen your life.

H. G. Wells, in "The Outline of History"—Some writers, even American writers, display a snobbish shame of something homespun about these makers of America. They feel that Benjamin Franklin, at the court of Louis XVI, with his long hair, his plain clothes and his gawky manner, was sadly lacking in aristocratic distinction. But stripped to their personalities, Louis XVI was hardly gifted enough or noble-minded enough to be Franklin's valet.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE PIGS.

"Hello, Porky," said Brother Bacon. "You know, Brother Bacon, you are getting to be very rude. You should call me grand-father, in a respectful tone."

"Oh all right," said Brother Bacon, "I'll call you grand-father when ever you wish me to."

"Sometimes you aren't so fussy about being called it, are you?" "It depends on what else I have to think of," said Grandfather Porky Pig.

"What else do you ever have to think of besides food?" asked Brother Bacon in surprise. "Ah, what indeed?" asked Miss Ham. "What indeed?" asked Mrs. Pink Pig.

"Squeal, squeal, what indeed?" asked Pinky Pig's mother. "Grunt, grunt, whatever else do you have to think of besides food?" asked Master Pink Pig.

"Yes, pray tell us that, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig. "You'd better tell us, we'd like to know," said Sammy Sausage.

"You're all getting much excited," said Grandfather Porky Pig. "Well," he added, "I have other things to think about besides food. At least one other thing to think about besides food."

"And now that I say that, I remind myself of the fact that I have other things to think about besides food."

"He has two other things to think about besides food," said Brother Bacon. "What in the world can they be? How astonishing a piece of news is that."

"How very astonishing and surprising," said Miss Ham, "squeal, squeal, it is hard to understand what they might be."

"It is almost impossible to believe that Grandfather Porky Pig, has two other things to think about besides food," said Mrs. Pink Pig. "Grunt, grunt, I can scarcely believe it."

"Squeal, squeal, I can scarcely believe it either," said Pinky Pig's mother. "I can scarcely believe it to be possible, grunt, grunt," said Master Pink Pig.

"I can scarcely believe it myself, grunt, grunt," said Pinky Pig. "I would like to hear what two other things you have to think of besides food," said Sammy Sausage. "Yes, Grandfather Porky, I would be very glad to hear what they are."

"Oh very well," said Grandfather Porky, "I will tell you."

"He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Brother Bacon. "He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Miss Ham. "He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Mrs. Pink Pig.

"He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Porky Pig's mother. "He is going to tell us, grunt, grunt," said Master Pink Pig.

"He is going to tell us, squeal, squeal," said Pinky Pig. "We are to hear," said Sammy Sausage, "grunt, we are to hear."

"Well, give me a chance to tell you then. You pigs all grunt and squeal so much I can't tell you anything. You take up all the time in grunting and squealing when I might be explaining myself."

"Yes, I have two other things to think about besides food," said Grandfather Porky Pig continued. "One of them is the beautiful thought of back scratching and the other is the beautiful thought of delicious mud."

"So you see I have two other thoughts. Yes, and fine thoughts they are. But still the thing I think of mostly, I will admit, is food, beautiful, beautiful food!"

"The other thoughts are good ones and we're glad to hear them," said Brother Bacon, "but we're very glad that you think mostly of food, for if you didn't you'd be a very queer pig, a queer pig indeed!"

"Impossible to believe."

FARMER'S WIFE NEARLY STARVED

Mrs. Peterson Says She Was Afraid to Eat on Account of Trouble That Followed.

"I weighed just a hundred and three pounds when I began taking Tanlac, but now I weigh a hundred and twenty-two pounds," declared Mrs. Peterson, the wife of a prosperous farmer of Lakeville, Mass., a suburb of New Bedford.

"I had acute indigestion," she said, "and no one knows how I suffered. I had cramping pains in my stomach that were almost unbearable, and I suffered no end of distress from gas and bloating. Why, I was actually starving to keep from being in such awful misery, and I lost thirteen pounds in weight. Sometimes I wonder how I lived through it all, and I just thought there was no hope for me. I was restless night and day and was easily irritated, and some nights I slept so little it didn't seem that I had been to bed at all."

"But now I feel as strong and well as if I had never been sick a day in my life, and I just know Tanlac is the best medicine in the world. I haven't a touch of indigestion now, and every time I sit down to the table I can't help but feel thankful to Tanlac. I have a wonderful appetite and have gained back all my lost weight and six pounds besides. I am simply overjoyed to be feeling so well, and I just praise Tanlac everywhere I go."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.—Advertisement.

The Advantage Was His. "Janette, I'm afraid you are a vain little wife. You gaze into your mirror so much."

"You oughtn't to blame me for that. I haven't your advantage."

"What's that?" "You can see my face without looking into a mirror."
