What are Accomplished Facts.

We copy the following eloquent extract from a speech recently delivered by the Hon.
 George H. Pendleton, at St. Paul, Minnesota:

They tell us we Democrats will cling to dead issues—the integrity of Republican government, the preservation of liberty, the maintenance of our Constitution and government, the happiness of mankind! Are those dead issues? Our love for them may be dead, our fidelity may be dead, our worthiness for them and our enjoyment may be dead, but the issues will live till they are settled in their full fruition, and the principles which underlie them are as durable as the Eternal Throne. They tell us like the Bourbons, we will forget nothing and learn nothing; we will not submit to accomplished facts. It is a mistake. It were wicked folly to resist the inevitable. We would bow reverently in its presence. But who shall open the book of fate and say of any course of events or of any condition of things, it is fixed forever?
 Who shall, with prophetic power, read the secrets of the Almighty, and repeat in another connection the words which, only once uttered throughout all the ages, reverberate along the course of eighteen centuries: "It is finished?" The human mind has no power to discern the unmanageable. The decrees of destiny are hidden from its view, that its aspirations may not be checked, its efforts may not be poised. When Wm. Pitt came back to the ministry, he formed with incredible energy and exertion, the Constitutional Alliance. It required the labor of two years.
 Napoleon broke up his camp at Boulogne, marched his heroic legions to the Danube, and in one hundred days captured an army at Ulm, and shattered the coalition on the bloody field of Austerlitz. The great statesman was bowed to the earth—his hope was gone—his courage broken—his efforts at an end. Broken hearted, he exclaimed, "Roll up the map of Europe for half a century," and died, believing that Napoleon attained to universal dominion. Austria was despised of her fairest possessions. Jena followed, and Prussia was humbled to the dust; Friedland followed, and the monarch of the North bowed his haughty head before the imperial eagles. Napoleon was mighty. His fiat vacated the throne of Naples. He pronounced the sentence: "The House of Braganza has ceased to reign," and that family went fugitives from Portugal to Brazil. Louis was King of Holland; Joseph was King of Spain; Murat was King of Naples. The Confederation of the Rhine regarded his frontier. The Duke of Warsaw and the Kingdom of Westphalia were the propra of this turore. Here seemed to be an accomplished act. But England refused to "accept the situation," and in less than three years Austria was in arms. Prussia was recaptured, Russia had become hostile, and in less than six years the empire of Napoleon had passed away—the fabric of his power had been developed—Europe was re-established within its original limits, and he himself languished a prisoner in the Island of St. Helena.

In 1870 the compromise measures were passed. They consisted of the admission of California, the amendment to the Fugitive Slave Law, the establishment of government in the territories. They commanded the support of the leading statesmen of both great political parties. They were declared to be an honest, honorable, final settlement of the issues of slavery as connected with the Federal Government. The National Conventions of 1852 both approved them. The people thoroughly endorsed them. But Chase, and Sumner, and Hale and Giddings refused to "accept the situation," and on the repeal of the Missouri Compromise they recommenced the agitation, which ended in war, and has obliterated from the statute book not only those laws, but the very principles on which those laws were based. Who shall dare to say what facts are accomplished?
 Who shall predict the "ways that are past finding out?" To "accept the situation" if it is wrong, is the cowardice of a timid spirit, or the weakness of a wearied one. Error is never fixed, wrong is never established, the courses of evil are never accomplished. Truth wages against them perpetual war. It never wears. Its strength never falls. Its spirit never flags, and it is immortal. "The eternal years of God are here." Let us be his soldiers and emulate her virtue. Let us accept nothing as accomplished unless our judgment and consciences approve the result as right. Let us stand by our Constitution which we believe to be right, and maintain our form of government which we believe to be beneficent. Let us accept no result as final which accomplishes their overthrow.
 Let us be unwearied in this contest, and I believe we shall save our institutions to bless our children even as they have blessed our fathers.

Gough's Apostrophe to Water.

Look at that, ye thirsty ones of earth!
 Behold it! See its purity! How it glitters, as if a mass of liquid gem! It is a beverage that was brewed by the hand of the Almighty himself! Not in simmering still or smoking fires, choked with poisonous gases, and surrounded by the stench of sickening odors and rank corruption, doth our Father in Heaven prepare the precious essence of life, the pure cold water; but in the green glade and grassy dell, where the red deer wanders, and the child loves to play; there God brews it; and down, down in the deepest valleys, where the fountains murmur and the rills sing; and high upon the tall mountain-tops, where the storm-clouds brood and the thunders crash; and away far out on the wide sea, where the hurricanes howl music and the big waves roar the chorus, sweeping the march of God, there he brews it, that beverage of life, health-giving water! And everywhere it is a thing of beauty; glistening in the dew drop, singing in the summer rain, shining in the ice gem, till the trees all seem turned into living jewels; spreading a golden veil over the setting sun, or a white gauze around the midnight moon; sporting in the cataract, sleeping in the glacier, dancing in the hail shower; folding its bright curtain softly about the windy world, and weaving the many-colored iris—that seraph's zone of the sky, whose warp is the rain-drops of earth, whose woof is the sunbeam of heaven, all checkered over with the celestial flowers by the mystic hand of refraction—still always it is beautiful, that blessed life-water! No poison bubbles on the brink, its foam brings no sadness or murder; no blood stains its limpid glass; broken-hearted wives, pale widows, and starving orphans, shed no tears in its depths; no drunkard's shrieking ghost from the grave curses it in words of eternal despair; beautiful, pure, blessed, and glorious, give me forever the sparkling, pure cold water.

Captain Ericsson's "Man-Monitor."

Captain Ericsson has invented a boat which he calls the "man-monitor," and which can be propelled by either steam or man power.
 He has a contract to build several of these boats for the Swedish Government, and one of the number has been so far completed that several successful experiments have been made with the machinery. Each boat is one hundred and three feet long, twenty feet wide, seven feet draft, and one hundred and forty tons burthen. The turret is nineteen feet long and twelve feet wide, plated with seven-inch armor. The boats will carry one fifteen-inch gun. The engines are twenty-horse power, and, with the boiler and shafting, weigh eight tons. As each boat can carry but four days' supply of coal, and as Sweden has to depend upon other nations for coal, it is desirable for her to obtain a formidable gunboat that can navigate the shallow bays of the shores of Sweden without using steam power. In war, the boats are propelled to the scene of engagement by man power, but during an action steam will be used, leaving the men at liberty to work the guns. The machinery is worked by twenty-four men, sitting on opposite seats, who work a crank similar to that of a hand engine. It is estimated that a gunboat can make fifty or sixty miles a day in this manner. Experiments on the first of the man-monitors at the Dela-meter iron works, have given much satisfaction. The total cost will be about $30,000 for each boat.

Fitting on "Style."

The Dayton Journal tells the following "yarn": A few months ago a gentleman moved to this city, and purchased nice property, and, among other things, to contribute to his convenience and comfort, procured a fine horse and a very genteel carriage. "A likely colored boy" was employed at a fair salary to take charge of the establishment, and discharge the numerous duties which would arise around a well regulated household. For a time things went on smoothly with Chores, but lately he seemed out of spirits, and seldom smiled. His employer observed this despondent demeanor of Chores, and he determined to get at the bottom of it. Perhaps he was in love! But no matter. Taking Chores aside one day, when he looked more gloomy than usual, he inquired considerably what ailed him. "Well, you see, Mas'r," began Chores, in a sort of tragic style, "you's got but one boss, while all de gentlemen 'bout here' has two; an' all de boys da calls me a one-boss nigger; an' as I can't stan' dat, I spects I'll have to resign! I likes you fus-rate, mas'r, an' I'd like to stay if you had two bosses, but you see how it is—de boys, dey can't quit hellerin', 'dere go dat one-boss nigger!" Not wishing to lose the services of so valuable an assistant, a second horse was purchased, and Chores became a two-boss nigger.

How the Tenure of Office Bill Works.

Another grave defect in the tenure of office bill is disclosed by its practical operation.
 There is no United
