SPECIAL VENIRE IS REDUCED TO FORTY-FIVE THE FIRST DAY

John J. McNamara Gives Brief Sketch Of What He Terms Uneventful Lives Of Himself and Brother

By Associated Press.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 9.—The trial of the McNamara brothers, under indictment for murder in connection with the blowing up of the Los Angeles Times, October 1, 1910, virtually began today before Judge Walter Bordwell of the Superior court. Indictments point that James B. McNamara will be tried first, though it is admitted the testimony in both cases is the same. Of 125 men named in the first venire, 122 answered the summons today and at the close the court had the venire culled out to 45, who were instructed to return Wednesday. There will be no session tomorrow on account of the election. The excuses offered by the men to not serve on the jury were accepted in most of the cases and the men excused.

The defense has spent some time conducting an "explosion school" in the mountains north of the city where gas and dynamite were tested to see the results. Another feature of the defense will be a tiny business building, an exact reproduction of the Times building, with presses, linotypes, desks, etc., by which the defense hopes to show the effects of various explosives.

Brief Sketch of Brothers.
LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 9.—Sitting in a corridor just outside his cell in the county jail, John J. McNamara, secretary-treasurer of the International Association of Bridge and Structural Ironworkers, briefly sketched what he termed the uneventful lives of himself and his brother, Jas. B. McNamara.

"I was born in Cincinnati December 23, 1876," he said, "and I am the oldest of six children living, although there were ten children originally. I attended the common schools in Cincinnati until I was twelve years old and then took a three year course in a business college.

"Nothing of any importance happened to me until the panic began in 1892, when I turned my hand to anything and everything to keep the pot boiling, as they say.

"I did my first bridgework at Cincinnati in 1898, joining the union the next year. Between 1898 and 1904, I visited various sections of the middle west, following my trade and working on steel bridges, viaducts and similar structures.

knee of Major Butt, the president's aide, and sat there the entire time the president was speaking. The major blushed some but made a good godfather.

ADVOCATES MAKING SUCH LAW NATIONWIDE IN ITS APPLICATION

Considers Electors of Arizona Are As Capable of Casting Advisory Vote For President As Senator

(Special to the Journal-Miner).

TUCSON, Ariz., Oct. 9.—Hoval A. Smith, progressive republican candidate for United States senator, has declared for the people's presidential primary and pledges himself if elected to urge the first legislature to pass a law as soon as it convenes providing for the advisory vote for president next spring when the delegates of the national conventions are elected and making it compulsory on the delegates to follow the advisory vote of their respective parties.

"I believe every Arizona voter should have the right not only to vote for president next year," says Hoval Smith, "but that the people should have a hand in naming the nominees of their respective parties. I think the LaFollette republicans and Taft republicans and Roosevelt republicans should have the right to cast their vote for the man of their choice when they elect delegates to the next republican national convention; also that the democrats who favor Woodrow Wilson or Champ Clark or Judson Harmon or William Jennings Bryan should have a direct voice in the naming of the next democratic presidential candidate.

"If I am elected to the senate I shall regard my election as the endorsement of the presidential primary law and shall urge upon the legislature to follow up with the resubmission of the recall of judges to a vote of the people by enacting the presidential primary law and when I get to Washington I shall use my influence as a senator to make this presidential primary law nationwide in its application. I think the people of Arizona are just as capable to cast an advisory vote for president as they are to cast an advisory vote for senator."

Hoval Smith will advocate the presidential primary law in every county in the new state.

SHORTAGE OF CITRUS FRUITS IS REPORTED

By Associated Press.
WASHINGTON, D. C., Oct. 9.—It is declared there is a shortage of citrus fruits in the north due, it is said, to a law in Florida prohibiting the shipment of ripe fruits. There is also higher prices prevailing. The general pure food laws which prevent transportation of artificially colored fruits is also adding to the shortage. "Fruit may be picked green and ripened by natural process, said Dr. Wiley, chief of the bureau of chemistry, "without running counter to the pure food law. Green fruit ripened by the sweating process, aid of chemicals or by steam heat in cans cannot be transported without violation of the law."
