Judge Porter arrived in Tucson on Friday evening.

Oury's reception in Prescott was golden to the last extreme if "Silence is Gold."

Porter is stronger today in Arizona than he has ever been. His canvass makes him votes while Oury loses wherever he goes.

The Los Angeles Herald is now one of the finest papers on the coast. It has recently been enlarged and put in a new dress.

Our devil insists that we received the Albuquerque Morning Poster this morning. The Journal appeared with two pages as posters.

Large deposits of copper have been discovered in the Pinal coal fields. With coal in abundance, that region promises largely for the future in the mining and smelting business.

The Enterprise informs us that the Deer Creek coal fields are being thoroughly explored, and that great deposits of bituminous coal have been opened up and will soon be worked extensively.

Arizona has an area of 113,916 square miles, equal in extent to the whole of New England and New York thrown in, with her 47,000 square miles.

The electric light has gone largely into use on river and ocean steamers. It should be available in all mills, etc., using any kind of power whereby the electricity can be generated.

The Star's Zabriskie revolt has proved to be not so much of a revolt after all. In fact, it proves to be mere wind work, which Judge Porter's presence in Tucson has very effectually shut off.

Arizona looks upon Republican Porter as a new kind of patent medicine—a sort of desperate expedient for a desperate emergency.—Star.

Which will act upon Oury's unterrified like a dose of lobelia. There won't be much left when that dose gets through with them.

It is a significant fact that the Democratic press of the Territory find nothing so very objectionable in Judge Porter. In fact, wherever he has been he has received the compliments of the press of the opposite party, and we doubt not would receive their support if it would not cost them such a tremendous flop.

It is now said that Crocker & Co. propose to build a railroad into northern Arizona, in which event it will undoubtedly take in the rich Salt River valley. We hope that the report is well founded and that the whistle of the locomotive will soon wake the slumbering industries and wealth of our whole Territory.

Our worthy Democratic contemporary over the way has begun to talk of the prosperity of the county and the economical administration of its government. Let us see. The county owes about $50,000 of a bonded debt, about $15,000 road debt, about $15,000 school debt, with probably $10,000 of a debt in a miscellaneous way; total, say $90,000, and what has the county got for this debt and all taxes collected up to the present time? No public buildings, no beneficiary institutions, no road to speak of; nothing but the administration of its government.

This is the present condition of affairs. Now, as to the supposed economy:

The amount of taxes to be collected this year, we believe is about $50,000, plus the fees, for collection, which is eight per cent. Six years ago, when the county was vastly greater in extent of territory and no railroad to pay down $20,000 of the taxes in a single payment, when there were but about $15,000 to be collected altogether, the fee of the collector was eight per cent; it is the same today; the fees and salaries of our county officials are the same today. Then fees and salaries were necessarily large; but that emergency has passed by, and they should today be as low in proportion as is the price of everything else. We cannot see where the economy of the thing comes in. We are told that the debt has been decreased. It is probable that it has not been increased, for if we read straight the last Legislature passed an act limiting the amount of indebtedness that the county could contract and making it necessary that a portion of it should be canceled and that the county should no longer pay interest on its warrants, This is probably the economy we hear about; but it has been an enforced economy. The people will not be deceived in these things. A tax at the rate of $4.58, plus eight per cent. for collection, has awakened them to the kind of "economy" that is being practised. Our rate is probably the highest in the Territory. In Cochise county, where great expense has been incurred, incident upon the erection of a new county, the rate of taxation is but $2.75 and collector's fees but four per cent. We fear our friend has struck the wrong lead when it begins to talk of economy.

The Miner urges low rates on the A. & P. railroad on goods coming into Arizona. We can say amen right heartily. It now costs four and a half cents to get a pound of goods from San Francisco to Phœnix. While we recognize the enterprise that builds railroads through a sparsely settled and barren country and the advantages they bring us over the old method of transporting goods and the enhancement of the value of property in the Territory in consequence, for the purposes of a more rapid development of the country we shall hail a reduction in rates as a great boon to the people at large, and believe that the increase of business coming to the railroad companies in consequence would justify that move.

James G. Blaine is receiving the compliments of the better class of the Democratic press, which is an evidence that some good can come out of Nazareth. Republicanism and its leaders have ever forced such acknowledgments from all honest opponents. Even here in Arizona, where feeling is often wrought up to great bitterness Democrats sometimes see good in Republicanism.

Judge Porter on Thursday evening addressed the Republicans of Tucson at Masonic Hall, which was packed to its utmost capacity, though but short notice had been given. The Citizen gives his speech in full and we find it in the Judge's usual happy and eloquent strain. We hope to be able to quote from it as opportunity affords.

We hear but very meagre reports of the Oury receptions in the north. Even our northern Democratic contemporaries have very little to say, and that little seems to require a great effort to say it. We fear the wind has been taken out of Delegate Oury's sails in that region of country, as it has in this and the southern part of the Territory.

HOME AT LAST.

Arrival of Engineer Melville and Party of the Lost Jeannette

Owing to the interest of the public in the Jeannette expedition and in the returned survivors we give a resume of their reception in the East and the gossip connected therewith We are indebted to an eastern exchange for the account here presented:

NEW YORK, Sept. 13.—Chief Engineer Geo. W. Melville, Seaman Wm. Noros and Wm. Ninderman, survivors of the Jeannette Arctic exploring exploring expedition and of the party that discovered the dead bodies of Lt. De Long and his companions, and Lieut. Robt. M. Berry of the burned Arctic exploring steamer Rogers arrived to day. Acting under instructions of the navy department, Commodore Upshur prepared to receive the brave party with all honors. On the tug, besides Lieut. Jacques, were Alexander Melville, brother of the famous engineer, Mrs. Demarest, their sister, and her two daughters, and many naval officers; also Capt. J. A. Wooten, father-in-law of the lamented Lieut. De Long. The steamship Parthia, bearing Melville and party, was met down the bay and as Engineer Melville's broad and smiling face was discovered by those on the tug, three set up a shout: "There's Melville, God bless him." A party of the Parthia's passengers started the song, "Home Again," and it was taken up all over the ship. Melville was soon on board the United States tug and made haste to the pilot-house, where the ladies of the party were seated. His sister and nieces were warmly embraced by him and everybody in the pilot house wept as Melville sobbed convulsively and held his sister to his breast. He sat for a few moments with his relatives and listened to their attempts to utter words of welcome. He patted his stalwart brother on the back and affectionately called him Sandy. Some of the more active of the Parthia's passengers had climbed in the rigging and were shouting, "Give us Melville." Several held aloft a bottle of champagne. Engineer Melville stepped out of the pilot-house and encountered Capt. Wooten, the aged father-in-law of the late Lieut. De Long. Capt. Wooten grasped the engineer's hand and after saying something in an undertone wept like a child. Melville steadied himself against the pilot-house and covering his face with his brawny hands, seemed thoroughly overcome with emotion. Tears filled the eyes of all who witnessed this scene, and among the spectators were many of the Parthia's passengers. When they had dried their eyes some one on the steamship proposed three cheers for Melville, and the response was enthusiastic and emphatic. Ninderman and Noros, seamen, who were with Melville, seemed anxious to escape observation. When Ninderman stepped into the pilot-house, he met his betrothed for the first time after a long and terrible absence The meeting was very affecting. They sat in a corner, and as they wept they whispered to each other. Lieut. Jaques had requested the naval officers and other persons, not relatives of Engineer Melville nor Ninderman, not to disturb the quiet of the pilot-house at this time, and lieutenant's request was most cheerfully acceded to.

The passengers on the Parthia continued to shout: "We want Melville!" When the engineer appeared they repeatedly cheered him. Champagne was opened on the deck of the Parthia and his health drank in many bumpers. Melville and friends were then transferred to the steam yacht, on board which were many naval officers, and where a welcome luncheon was spread and the hospitalities of the city tendered by Alderman McClave. Tears trickled down the engineer's face as he listened to the alderman's words, and when he attempted to reply he stammered and hesitated. Then he seemed to recover courage and said in a bold way he was a New York boy, one who had been brought up in the public schools of this city. He felt that he had a right to say that he and his companions had done their duty. He had been in government service twenty-two years and had stood many kicks and hard knocks. Then he paused, and said with much feeling, "And I would have stood by my friends had they stood by me." He suddenly checked himself at this point, and Col. Church, on behalf of the citizens' committee, welcomed him and his companions to this city and invited them to a banquet in their honor at Delmonico's.

Mr. Hall said to Melville, "Come, let us take a drink."

Melville laughed as he replied, "Gentleman, I am somewhat of a missionary; every time I take a drink of American whiskey I feel I am helping to pay the national debt."

Some one said to Melville, "How well you look."

"Yes," replied the engineer, with a strange emphasis on his words, "There is nothing the matter with my eyes."

Melville was introduced to the reporters, and when asked whether he desired to communicated with the public upon any point of special interest, he said: "No, not at the present time. The whole matter of the condition of the Jeannette and the result is to be investigated by a naval court of inquiry, and I am not allowed to say anything until examined by that court. Then everything will be made clear."

Here a naval officer interrupted with: "You know, of course, that Congress has appointed a special committee to investigate the matter?"

"Yes," answered Melville, "and—"

At this point several of the committee began to shout, "Here, Melville, come here; don't you say anything; you've said just enough;" and one of the committee seized him by the collar and withdrew him from the secretary of the representatives of the newspapers.

The naval officer stated that Melville has the Jeannette's log and a private log, Lieut. DeLong's last written instructions to him, and, in fact, is prepared at the proper time to repeat DeLong's last words to them.

Afterwards Melville said to the reporters he had no intention of being rude, but he was about to say, when taken from their secretary, that he had determined to make no statement concerning Lieut Danenhower at this time. He was satisfied he had done his duty.

A file of Marines to salute Melville is to be landed on the dock and escort the arctic voyagers to the hotel.

Danenhower's Card.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Lieut. Danenhower issues the following card:

My attention has been drawn to several items and comments referring to alleged trouble between Chief Engineer Melville and myself. The latest one is in the Washington Star of the last evening, copied from a New York paper, and is the first that has taken definite shape, stating, under the title of "Melville vs Danenhower," the alleged charge of Lieut. Danenhower that "if he (Melville) had not turned back from the first search Capt. De Long and his companions might have been saved." The above alleged charge has never been made by me. In the first place the facts would not admit of such a charge, for when Melville turned back the Captain's party had been dead at least fifteen days. In the second place I would never make such a charge, except to proper official authorities. I have always avoided adverse and premature criticism of my late comrades and will simply refer to what I said when confronted by half a score of journalists on board the Cello on my arrival at New York and published in the New York Herald, May 29, 1882, under the caption "Vindication of Melville. This was caused by my learning he had been hastily and unfairly criticised previous to my return. I have made no charge against anyone. My personal relations with Mr. Melville have been of a very pleasant character.

Regretting that I have to appear in print and hoping there will be no further necessity for it I am

Respectfully,
JOHN W. DANENHOWER.

Engineer Melville's Wife.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 17.—Mrs. Melville of the Jeanette Artic expedition, seized with delirium last night at the close of a demonstration at the home of the family, at Sharon Hill, following, it is said, an interview with her husband. She had been suffering from nervous prostration previous to his arrival. The excitement of mind appeared to subside when her husband was out of her presence. Melville left the house the same night with friends, going to Darby, near by, and has not returned to-day. Dr. W. Fisher Longstreet and Dr. Bartleson were called in attendance and held a consultation. They determined to hold another examination with a view, of placing Mrs. Melville where she may be permanently restored to health. The affair creates a profound feeling of sadness at Sharon Hill and in this city.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—Chief Engineer Melville announces his detention at his home in Sharon Hill by sickness in his family, and that he will probably not arrive here still Wednesday. He will be escorted from the depot to the hall where a public reception will be given him.

Street Shade Trees.

[Communicated].

ED. HERALD:—In our issue of the 23d instant you asked that some one suggest some tree that will flourish here, to take the place of the ungainly and unhealthy cottonwood. I would suggest the ash as the prettiest, cleanest and most dense of foliage of all trees that have been tried in Phœnix. Take the few ash trees that are growing within the city limits and by a stroll through our streets where they are growing—no one could think of taking the sidewalk—it will be seen that they are all green, healthy and pretty. Take a look at the beautiful tree which stands crosswise of the street from the adobe pigeon roost opposite the schoolhouse, and I think it will be generally concluded that it would be difficult to find a more handsome street shade tree, or one that would give a more dense shade, and yet I am told that this tree has received no training and but little care, besides, it has been out of luck for several years during the time it has been growing in having its foliage plucked from it to make medical teas for its Mexican neighbors.

The willow is but a small improvement on the cottonwood. It does not give as good a shade, its limbs obstruct the sidewalk, it is bad for cotton in the spring, its foliage keep dying and being replaced by new leaves the same as the cottonwood; it is subjects to the ravages of the butterfly more than the cottonwood as any one can see by a trip up Castle Creek or the Agua Fria, its foliage dies early in the fall as in the case of the cottonwood. The ash on the otherhand seems to be free from all of these objections. If the ash is of slow growth, when compared with the cottonwood it is long lived. It may take it four or five years to become as good a shade as the cottonwood will be in two years but when it does assume the proportions of a tree there is some style about it and it will still be a shade tree when our great grand daughters will have given birth to babes. On motion the resolutions of the following report were adopted as the Platform of the Convention:

To the Chairman and Members of the Maricopa County Republican Convention:

Your Committee appointed to prepare a Platform and Resolutions offer the following:

Resolved, That the Republicans of Maricopa County hereby renew their allegiance to the National Republican Party, and the principles which it has ever sustained.

That we are opposed to all monopolies and in favor of equal rights equal burdens and equal benefits to all, with specials privileges to none and hold that the best government is that wherein an injury to one is the concern of all.

That we are opposed to the monopoly of lands, and demand that all public lands, including those forfeited by non-compliance with law, shall be restored to the public domain, and that there shall never be any land grants or land subsidies hereafter promoted by the Government.

That the legislature should again earnestly petition Congress to return to the public domain all lands in this Territory, heretofore granted to railroads that have been forfeited by non compliance with the terms of the grant, and that our delegate in Congress be requested to urge upon Congress the passage of such a law.

That the welfare and interest of our county demands that its local government should be managed by reliable, capable and economical men, and that, it be represented in the legislature by men of undoubted ability and integrity, to the end that the enactment of such laws may be urged upon the Legislature as will lead to a more economical administration of county governments.

That we are in favor of increasing the county road fund to such an extent as to enable the Board of Supervisors to maintain our public highways in good condition.

That our public schools should be maintained and encouraged by liberal legislation.

That all corporations created by law should be governed by law in the interest of the people and that all the property of corporations should pay its just proportion of taxes.

Respectfully submitted.

Adjourned sine die.

VULTURE LETTER.

ED. HERALD: It has been cold enough for the last few days here to freeze. A cold wave has struck us, no doubt, and the Hassayampa is on the rampage once more. This Arabian desert received a great and glorious rain Saturday noon and evening.

Saturday last was observed as a holiday by our friends the Mexicans, in commemoration of their independence from the Spanish government. They had speeches, processions, flags, fireworks, giant powder and forty-rod whiskey, and a general "hip, hip, hurrah," all day long.

At night there was the jolliest, gayest and best dance of the season if not the best dance ever held in the town. The city hall was full of Americans and Mexicans, the cream of the city and the surrounding country, and all had a way-up and "esta bueno" time. Everyone came out in their finest and best attire, dressed in good taste and the height of the latest fashion. The music was good and the dancing excellent. The supper was prepared at Mr Drew's hotel and they tell me it was the best supper ever prepared in the city, and you know when he goes in to do a thing he does it. All went on well until towards morning, when the forty-rod whiskey commenced to have its effect and two or three got to quarreling. It was all a Mexican affair and one of them cut another with a small knife, across the face and a little cut on the breast. Except that, everything went lovely The jamboree is over now, and most all are down to hard work again.

Mr. Tom Brown, of Phœnix, is in the city. He looks whole and hearty, and thinks that Judge Porter will be elected by a large and overwhelming majority. Good for Tom.

Our friend, William Church, has gone to Maricopa to meet his bride, and no doubt they will be married at Phœnix. Mr. Ed. we wish you to give them a good reception and attend the wedding, and when they come home we shall stand by them.

Mr. Brill and wife from the Hassayampa were in attendance at the dance; also Mrs. Grant of Wickenburg, and several others from abroad that I did not know.

Mr. Dulton is refurnishing his house on Green Point. No doubt he also contemplates a change for the better. Now is your time old boy, and it is an excellent idea, boys, to prepare the cage before the bird comes.

I am sorry that I did not see the point in my younger days, but I shall try and profit by these lessons for my next.

Mr. McClelland has put up a liberty pole in front of his new residence and the American flag went up early on Saturday morning, and out of the third story window I can see two small Mexican flags. Brother Mc. is one of the most patriotic gentlemen of Vulture.

Several freight teams came in today with goods for our merchants. It is just after pay-day, you know.

TOM CORWIN.
