The Tests Applied in Suspected Cases.

A Suggestion from the Department of Agriculture Anticipated by the Territorial Veterinarian.

A few days ago THE REPUBLICAN mentioned a communication from Secretary Morton of the department of agriculture, to Governor Hughes with reference to the disease of glanders among the horses in the vicinity of Mesa. The secretary offered to send a quantity of mallein to the territorial veterinarian by which the certainty of the presence of the disease might be determined. The communication contained a brief description of mallein and its action upon the disease.

In justice to the territorial veterinary surgeon, Dr. Norton, it may be said that he had already, in fact as soon as the presence of the disease began to be doubted, procured a quantity of mallein from other sources preferring not to encounter the delay which would naturally follow an application through the department and the mallein test was made weeks ago and the character of the disease was determined to his satisfaction though many of the persons among infected stock still believed that the surgeon might be mistaken. Others accepted the test as final, their diseased stock was killed and there was a perceptible check in the spread of the malady.

To effectually remove the doubts of those inclined to believe that their animals were suffering from a distemper Dr. Norton next resorted to the test by inoculation and the disease was communicated to several burros upon which its action was rapid and was shown in rising temperature, swelling and mucous discharges followed by death. Every known test has been now applied and with few exceptions, perhaps none, the owners of glandered animals are consenting to have them killed, so that the chief obstacle to the stamping out of the disease may be said to have been removed. It can be eradicated and nothing can be done but to kill the affected animals and exercise extreme precaution in the care of stock not already exposed and also in the matter of wholesale disinfection.

JUDGE WILLIAMS' RETURN.

No Commission Yet But Improved Health.

Judge Williams returned yesterday morning from Washington. He did not bring with him his commission as judge of the First judicial district but he brought a ruddiness of color which shows that his trip, whatever mental anxieties may have attended it, was beneficial to his general health.

As to the commission the judge is hopeful though he was given no assurance from the department of justice that it would be issued. His friends in Washington are confident that the investigation of the charges will close in his favor. A great deal of reliance is placed by him upon the telegraphic endorsement recently forwarded to the department by the business men of Phoenix.

A Matrimonial Boom.

There was unwonted activity in matrimonial affairs yesterday. Geo. B. Williams and Lucy B. Anderson were married at the Lemon hotel yesterday morning. At the same place and almost at the same time Wm. A. King and Louisa B. Clark were united by Justice Johnstone. The contracting parties live in Tombstone and arrived here yesterday morning accompanied by Mrs. W. C. Staehle and F. G. McDougal. A license to marry was issued to Geo. W. Chitwood and Mary E. Brown, both of the country.
