

HARVESTING THE CORN.

A New Hampshire Man Tells How He Has Been Doing the Work.

I plant my corn in sections of 12 rows, skip three, plant 12 more, skip three and so on. I plant potatoes, peas or anything that can be harvested before the corn in those three rows as shown below:

For a harvesting wagon I take the axle AA and wheels of my hay rigging and take two stout poles BB and attach them to the rocker and hind axle the same as to a hay rigging and then bore four holes CCCC in each pole. I then put four stakes DDDD in each pole underneath and let them hang down 18 inches from the top of the poles, then put the cross pieces on from one stake to the other and pin them fast, and lay a couple of boards on the cross pieces for the bottom and put one on each side. Put a piece in front and one behind and that forms a box. Use wooden pins or bolts to fasten the pieces together. This rigging is drawn to the first gangway, a bar driven in the ground and the horse hitched. I pick the ears of corn first and put them in this rigging. I take six rows on each side of the gangway and when I come to the next gangway I do the same and so on until the piece is covered. The ears of corn are put in a large open chamber and husked at my leisure.

Then I make a horse for shocking corn. Take a small pole and bolt the legs to the pole and bore a hole for the pin. The cornstalks are shocked as I go along. I take six rows, three on each side of the horse, and bind the shocks with rope. There will be two rows of shocks in a section. I use the same rigging to draw my cornstalks to the barn and the shocks are easily taken off. I put my cornstalks just where I want them and do not disturb them until fed out. There is no waste in feeding. I do my work all alone without any help. This is the cheapest way and best to harvest the corn crop that I know of.—A. H. Watts, in Farm and Home.

RIDING IN A RICKISHA.

Experience of an American Traveler with the Human Horses of Japan.

The most novel, and withal natural, sensation I ever experienced regarding rickshas and their human horses was on a certain occasion when driving, or rather being pulled, in Tokyo, writes Walter Rogers Furness in September Lippincott's. I was idly watching a rickisha ahead of me, which was bowling along at a goodly rate and contained two young Japanese girls most elaborately dressed. All of a sudden, to my horror and alarm, the hub of the rickisha struck sharply against the hub of another rickisha going in the opposite direction with so severe a shock that their collie pitched forward on his head, breaking both shafts, and the two girls rolled out on top of him. Were it not for the mud the tumble was in reality no more severe nor dangerous than that of falling off a chair. Nevertheless, without stopping to reason, I took an instantaneous flying leap over my collie's shoulders, landing close to the overturned rickisha, seized a girl in each hand and dragged them clear of the wreck and the cast steel. Of course without the greatest promptitude on the part of the collie on the ground, entangled in the harness, would in his struggles kick the girls' brains out or else get up snorting and terrified and trample them to death before he bolted up the street with the broken shaft dangling at his heels.

I have a recollection of even thinking, as soon as the two girls were in a place of safety, that I ought to dart back and sit on the collie's head while some one got the harness off. Ah, but the two poor Japanese maidens! What could have been their sensations when they were suddenly and rudely grabbed by a wild-looking foreigner, dragged through the mud and bundled up against a wall? All, forsooth, because that big, ugly foreigner was afraid of a very timid, apologetic and bruised little collie.

Where Sheep Break Their Limbs.

Sheep suffering from broken limbs—generally resulting from their getting entangled in wire fences, and similar causes—should be confined in a shed or yard till recovery. Place the broken bones in proper position as quickly as possible after the accident, and tightly splinter the limb—a piece of soft leather being wound firmly round under the splints, which are best secured by a strong linen bandage soaked in starch. The bandages may in most cases be removed in the course of three weeks and a plain dry bandage put on.
