PREHISTORIC MARKS. Gigantic Footmarks Found in a Texas Canyon.

In the Palo Duro canyon lying north or Amarillo, Tex., the hacking away of a large piece of alluvial earth has recently revealed a singular trace of prehistoric life. This, says the Philadelphia Times, consists of the unmistakable trail of some large animal going over the rocks, followed by another, probably of the human kind, or at any rate of a gigantic specimen of the ape.

The first animal, judging from the marks it left on the impressionable rock, was of the reptile family, for its tail, soft underneath, though weighted with scales sufficiently to make it heavy enough to drag an inch and a half deep, left a broad, smooth trench, while the claws by which it assisted itself were of the true alligator type, webbed between. These claws were nearly five inches long, and were evidently intended to aid the creature in climbing on land, as its webbed membrane served it for swimming in water.

But more curious are the marks of the animal which pursued it. These are of two hands, nearly three times the size of the ordinary man's hand, and those of two active feet, both hands and feet possessing five members, though all of equal length, except the thumb. This, while shorter, is yet longer in proportion by half an inch than is found in man of to-day. It was also of unusual strength, sinking much deeper than the rest of the hand into whatever it seized upon. The nails are curved and very powerful, those of the feet being particularly so, grasping the rock firmly.

Another singular thing is the position of the marks. They are carved in a rock standing nearly perpendicular to the bed of the ancient river nine hundred feet below, and which must once have been as wide as the Mississippi, and of a current sufficiently strong to have cut its way through these granite rocks. This position of the remains would indicate that the reptile turning up from the stream was pursued by the other animal, and probably killed on land. This part of the country is pronounced by geologists to be among the most ancient formation of the continent.

The rock on which these marks are to be found is about one hundred and fifty feet below the surface of the earth, and is only to be reached by one swinging over the side of the precipice. They were discovered by an amateur geologist, who, noting the fall of the soil, went down in the hopes of adding to the rich antediluvian spoils this singular chasm has yielded. Plaster casts have been taken of the prints, and will be forwarded to the state museum at Austin. The marks are plainly visible from a ledge some fifty feet down the side of the canyon, and have been viewed by all in that section interested in such matters.
