WOOLEN MEN DISAPPOINTED.

The demand for American wool was light toward the close of last month, owing to the heavy imports by foreign wool, says the American Economist.

In addition to this Messrs. Justice, Bateman & Co. assigned "another cause for the present quietness." They say that "manufacturers are disappointed in regard to orders for their fabrics." At the time when the prices for goods had to be fixed they were out of wool; the new clip was in the hands of speculators whose demands as to price seemed extravagant, and dearer wool was inevitable.

Successful labor strikes involving higher wages in addition to dearer wool pointed to the necessity of higher prices for goods, and manufacturers refused to take orders except at an advance.

Foreign manufacturers at this time having ample supplies of wool secured at the lowest prices on record, and being free from the embarrassments which surrounded American manufacturers, of which they were quick to see their advantage, freely booked orders at lower values than domestic manufacturers could name. Liberal orders went abroad for goods that heretofore had been made at home. When American manufacturers discovered that the wool boom was over, and that American prices had failed to reach those current at this time last year, they modified their prices for goods. But it was then too late to recover the business that had been secured by foreign mills.

Thus it is that owing to heavy imports of raw wool and the loss of considerable business for the American mills, the home demand for wool has been too light to give that buoyant tone to the American market that is now being enjoyed by foreign wool markets.

DEMOCRATIC BLUFF.

The Washington correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger has discovered at the national capital "many conservative Republicans" who fear that the injection of the tariff question into the Ohio canvass will result in a Democratic victory there. He says the Democrats have been anxious for the Republicans to make their campaign on a tariff basis, and adds there is a rumor to the effect that the Ohio Democrats will circulate the speeches made this week at Springfield, by Senator Sherman, Governor McKinley and ex-Governor Foraker, as Democratic campaign literature.

The whole policy of the Democratic managers is to dodge the tariff question, by declaring that the people have had enough tariff tinkering, that they want the tariff schedules to be left alone, that there is a sentiment against another disturbance of business, and that the only question is the one of the currency. We do not believe that the raising of the tariff question in Ohio means a defeat of the Republican ticket. The Ohio farmers who raise sheep know full well that the Democratic tariff has played the mischief with wool, and they have every reason to hope for a revision of the wool schedules. Further than that, the operation of the new tariff schedules has demonstrated, after a trial of one year, that sufficient revenue cannot be raised under the existing rates. Besides, the scandalous undervaluation of imports, made possible by the ad valorem plan of levying customs duties, has resulted in bringing far more goods into this country than are accounted for.

The Democrats who shout with glee that the people have had enough tariff revision are correct so far as they go. There has been enough tariff revision along Democratic lines; that is true as gospel. Any further tariff changes by the Republicans would not be along a line which made possible an increase in importations and a decrease in exportations. Any Republican work upon the tariff schedules would not be in the direction of keeping wages from 10 to 28 per cent below the rate of wages paid in 1892. Anything that the Republicans might do in the way of amending the tariff schedules would not disturb business in a disastrous way. That fact is lost sight of altogether by the Democrats in Ohio, who foolishly believe they can use the Republican speeches made at Springfield against the Republican party.

In this connection it is well to call attention to the series of letters printed in a Republican paper in New York city, written by a number of manufacturers, and giving the lie to the stories printed by the New York World and the New York Evening Post. Those papers printed a list of manufacturers who had reduced the wages of their employes under the McKinley act and had increased them under the Gorman act. One of these letters was written by James Lord, secretary and treasurer of the Pennsylvania Bolt and Nut company of Lebanon, Pa., who declares the statements of the two newspapers mentioned to be false. He adds that at present the wages paid by his company are 14 per cent below the rate paid in 1892. Then he says:

"Wages remain very much lower, even after recent advances, because if 1892 wages were demanded under the present conditions, the goods would be made in Europe."

That is the milk in the cocoanut, and the men who have been affected by the Democratic tariff reductions know just where the responsibility lies. The Democratic bluff that the tariff issue is not an issue will not have any effect upon those who are in on the ground floor of the school of bitter experience. They know that a return to power of the Democratic party, by whom they were deceived in 1892, means that the Wilson idea would prevail. Under Republican management any tariff legislation would be to the benefit of the wage-earners.

CALIFORNIA SAW WORKS. The attention of readers of The Republican is called to the card of the California Saw works, which appears on the fifth page of the paper.

Bird & Haughy, the proprietors, enjoy the reputation of being the leaders in their line on the Pacific coast, and Arizona patrons of the firm may be sure of proper treatment and the best work by placing orders with them.

The capacity of the California Saw works for turning out all kinds of saw and mill machinery is of such magnitude that all orders are promptly filled. Only skilled workmen are employed and the product of the works is first-class in every particular.

The statement has been made by a United States consul that consumption causes thirty-six times as many deaths in Paris as smallpox and scarlet fever combined. These figures suggest the dreadful character of the disease. People shun both the others mentioned but there is seldom any fear of consumption. It has, however been shown that the latter is contagious. Multitudes die from the disease as a result of being brought in contact with it. Cases occur continually in which two or more persons die from it in a single family, when there has not been any hereditary tendency. The doctors now understand this is a result of the disease being contagious. This suggests that some means to prevent well persons from being exposed would be a blessing. The difficulty about that is that consumption is a lingering disease and families would not consent to separation. Therefore humanity is likely to keep this most destructive of all scourges hugged to its breast.

The public debt has been increased some $300,000,000 during the present administration. If anyone had suggested to the Democrats during the last campaign that such would be the result of their success, he would have been fortunate to have escaped from mob violence at their hands. In the next campaign they will have the accomplished fact to face and they will find it constitutes a serious obstacle in the way of their success.
