The Great Trials of History

TRIAL OF GENERAL WILLIAM WALKER

When General William Walker was shot for filibustering at Truxillo, Honduras, on September 12, 1869, he said to the people who had gathered about the police square to see him meet his doom, "The way which I made on Honduras was unjust. Those who accompanied me are not to blame. I alone am guilty. I ask pardon of the people. I receive death with resignation. Would that it were one for the good of society."

He then sat on a chair to which he was bound. A file of ten soldiers advanced and fired on the instant. He died immediately. The soldiers gave three cheers and all was over. Walker was but thirty-six years of age at the time.

Walker was a daring character and seemed to believe that his "star of destiny" had great things in store for him. Few adventures of his class ever ran such a race of short-sighted and fatal folly. In 1853 he was the leader of an expedition which sailed from San Francisco with the intention of taking possession of Sonora, then a northern state of Texas, adjoining California. He landed at a place called La Paz, where he met with but little resistance. He proclaimed "an independent Republic of Lower California," and himself president, at the same time appointing each one of his sixty followers to some official station. He very soon, however, had to evacuate or starve and surrendered himself to the United States authorities. On his arrival at San Francisco he was tried for a violation of the neutrality laws, but was acquitted.

Early in the summer of 1855, Walker placed himself at the head of an expedition numbering about sixty men to proceed to Nicaragua, then in a state of internal conflict. He landed at Realajo and marched to Leon to join the headquarters of the Nicaraguan Democratic party or army. Here he hoped to have his dream realized, that of forming on the Isthmus a broad domain to be extended into Mexico and South America. He succeeded partially at first. Brushing the Democratic chief aside, Walker now proclaimed himself a candidate for the Presidency, and was, of course, elected. Being now dictator he began to run things to suit himself, and to his credit it must be said that his acts were upon the whole, fair and just. But the odds against him were too great, and will all Central America in league against him, backed by Europe and the United States, his cause was doomed. Defeat followed defeat, and in January, 1857, he abandoned Grenada and took refuge on a United States vessel, which landed him at Panama.

Two other attempts were made by the impressive man to invade Nicaragua, both of which were frustrated by the United States authorities, and in June, 1869, he invaded Honduras, where he met with a vigorous resistance and was eventually captured by the British and turned over to the native Honduran authorities. It was on the third of September that the arrest was effected and on the following day he was turned over to the Honduran authorities with several of his officers. The march of the captured men to prison was slow and solemn. Walker, at the head of his men, keeping time to the beat of the drum, and dressed with much simplicity, was the object upon which every eye was fixed. As soon as Walker had entered the prison he was placed in heavy irons and, being asked if he needed anything, replied with but one word, "water." Soon afterwards he sent for a chaplain. As he knelt at his feet he said: "I am resigned to die; my political career is ended."

There was a mock trial which was wholly unnecessary for the outcome was known before it started, he was to be shot. It was not until the eleventh hour that Walker was informed of his doom. It was seven o'clock in the morning when the messenger brought him the news, and his only reply was his asking at what hour he would be executed, and if he should have time to write. On the twelfth of September, at eight o'clock in the morning, the condemned man was marched to the place of execution. He showed throughout the greatest coolness, not even once changing color, while walking from the prison to the place where he was to be shot. Two soldiers, with drawn swords, advanced in front of him, and three with fixed bayonets followed behind. In his right hand he carried a hat, and in his left a crucifix. It was here his great dream and his eventful life went out together.

Y. W. C. A. GETS NEEDED MONEY

More Than $300 Over Target Raised by the Committees on Financial Campaign Which Ended Last Night

Over three hundred dollars more than the budget for the nine months to come was raised by the Young Women's Christian Association, in their campaign which was concluded yesterday evening. The sum total of the work for the week just passed was $3434. It was raised in four days time, by work of four teams and their captains, for the expenses of the Y. W. for the coming nine months. Beside the amount of the Y. W. there are still due from pledges some several hundred dollars.

"We wish to state the Young Women's Christian Association's thanks to the whole city," said Mrs. E. N. Phillips, last evening. "Their support of the campaign was loyal. Their treatment accorded the representatives of the Y. W. was always agreeable. And the way they came to the aid of the institution, when they were called on speaks words for their generosity and well wishes for the association. We wish to thank each and every citizen in Phoenix. They deserve it."

"The success of the campaign was due primarily to the way the people came to the aid of the association. But back of that, there was the spirit of the movement in the workers of the Y. W. The feeling of 2 percent, inspiration and 98 percent, perspiration, instilled in the workers by Miss James, district manager for Arizona, did wonders for the campaign. The personnel of the workers, their personality, the cause, the need of the money for the association work, all of them were contributing causes of its success. We have won out, in a most successful manner, and again I want to thank Phoenix."

Miss Lillian E. Jones, district manager of the Y. W. for Arizona, left immediately following the successful close of the campaign for her home in California. Before leaving, she stated that she had never had the privilege of working with more congenial people and more loyal than she had found right here in Phoenix.

Those who contributed to the success of the final day of the campaign were:

COLORED WIGS WILL BE WORN IN PHOENIX

Consignment Already on the Way Will be Shown at Vic Hanny's Window

The Republican carried a story yesterday morning which reviewed the newest of fads in the east, the wearing of colored wigs to match "my lady's" gown. Much space has been devoted in the metropolitan publications to the innovation in feminine adornment, and the discussion that has arisen in many of the social circles in the east has created two factions. One of the younger set opposed to the fad, and one of the older devotees of fashion, who have seen fit to favor the style, if so it may be called. A critic in reviewing the chance of the wigs becoming popular, has pointed out the possible fact, that the older set may have had method in its madness when it endorsed the wearing of the colored hair pieces, for age is sometimes not conducive to luxuriant hair. At any rate, the fad is so far advanced that Lady Duff Gordon, who is the last word in feminine fashions, in the east, has seen fit to not only discuss it, but predict that it will be a popular fad.

When the Republican item came to the eye of the management of the Savoy Theater, a telegram was dispatched to Louis E. Jacobs, who is in the east, asking him to secure wigs for several members of his company and to procure gowns to match. Last night a wire from him announces that the wigs and gowns are on their way to Phoenix and at a date to be announced later, they will be shown publicly to Phoenixians. They will be placed on exhibition in the shop window of Vic Hanny's store and later will be worn by Miss Wainwright and Miss Simpson.
