WILL HELP PUSH SALES OF POPULAR HUPMOBILE

Announcement has been made by the Hupp Motor Car company of the appointment of W. C. Howard to the position of assistant sales manager, and Charles E. Burk as assistant advertising manager. The two appointments have had wide experience in their respective lines of work and will assist sales and advertising manager, F. J. Mooney, in the activity of building up the Hupmobile selling organization.

The appointment of Mr. Howard as assistant sales manager was made in recognition of his unusual ability while acting as traveling sales representative for the Hupp Motor Car company. He is rated as one of the most successful salesmen in the automobile industry and was instrumental in building up Hupmobile business throughout the middle west. Wide experience in sales work will enable him to cope successfully with the tasks of his new undertaking.

Mr. Burk, who formerly was connected with the service advertising department of the Pennington Engraving company, Detroit, has had wide experience in the advertising field. His initial bow to advertising work dates back some years ago, when he was newspaper correspondent in the east, which work he later dropped to take on agency work with the J. Walter Thompson company. In his capacity as Detroit representative of that concern he made a great number of friends among advertising publishing companies throughout the middle west. He will assume his new duties at once.

An extended sales and advertising campaign for 1915 is outlined by F. J. Mooney, sales and advertising manager, and the company plans to make the next season the biggest in the history of the organization. As evidence of the resourcefulness of the Hupp Motor Car company, the officials are planning an intensive

UNEXPECTED SHOCK OF SUPERVISOR FRANK LUKE

When Supervisor Frank Luke professed the hospitality of his roof to James Miller, Junior, the other night, he did not know what had been weighed out for him while he was representing his claims to office before a crowd of Glendale voters.

It was when he pulled up at the corner of Washington and Fifteenth streets, that an awful misgiving seized him. When he left there had been a perfectly good house right on that corner—and he could swear that he had taken nothing stronger than ice-water!

In that pile of ashes he certainly did not recognize his happy home, and as for the aforesaid roof—he couldn't even pick it out. It was with mingled emotions that he gazed on the sorry pile and wondered what had become of his pet canary bird. Then, of course, there was his wife and the family. However, he was soon reassured, for he found everybody, including the bird, in sorry plight but safe, in the care of kindly neighbors.

PYTHIAN DAY AT RIVERSIDE

Members of the Order and Their Families Will Have Big Time Today—Pleasing Sports Program and Plenty to Eat

This is to be a big day for Pythians of Phoenix and the surrounding country. Every Pythian and every member of a Pythian's family is expected to journey this afternoon to Riverside park, where no end of entertainment and plenty to eat has been provided by the entertainment committee of Phoenix Lodge, No. 2, Knights of Pythias.

It is now planned to have the water sports and "track events" begin in the middle of the afternoon and from then on until 9:30 o'clock when the call for lunch will be sounded, there will be something doing. There will be liberal prizes for all the events and no Pythian or member of his family can afford to remain away on this day of days.

The committee has arranged that every member of the order and their families shall be presented with a pretty badge, so that mutual recognition will be possible.

Word has been sent out that the entire space south and east of the bath house has been reserved for the Pythians. There tables will be spread and lunch served to all members and their families without charge. There is no need of bringing anything to eat. There will be an ample supply of good things; in fact a surplus is to be stored for those who attend. Following the open-air luncheon, there will be a short talk by Knight J. H. Langston, after which the evening will be devoted to the special features provided by the park management, which include a fancy ball and a confetti battle.

Masked Ball

Throughout the east at this season carnivals hold sway at the various summer resorts and today Phoenix is to have a young carnival of its own. While it is only a forerunner of greater things to come a little later in the season, the carnival, confetti fight and masked ball which will usher out the last half holiday of the season at Riverside tonight will provide a world of fun for young and old. The big mark is an ideal place for a frolic of this kind and the whole place will be turned over to the revelers this evening. The usual carnival paraphernalia will be much in evidence and the tickler and blow papers will supply their share of fun.

The masked ball promises to be a corker, and prizes will be given for the prettiest, most novel and most ridiculous costumes. A riot of fun and color is expected. All maskers must unmask at the gate before entering the park.

Real Estate Day

Real estate men moved on Riverside in force yesterday, completely overrunning the park, which eventually surrendered unconditionally and without opposition. The greatest of all the valley boosters made merry at the latest addition to the big attractions of Phoenix and told each other what a fine place this city was to live in and how much finer it was now that Riverside had supplied the long-needed summer resort attachment.

The real estate swam in the big pool, slid the chute, examined the zoo, paying particular attention to the "Great Red Bat" and the Mexican groundhog, climbed the slippery pole, or tried to, and wound up at the dancing pavilion at 5 o'clock, where they met in boosters' convalescence and said a lot of things pertaining to the good outlook for a banner season and finally endeavored to answer a number of questions put to them for the express purpose of testing their knowledge of the city and surrounding country. These questions and answers, together with the correct answers, will be printed in tomorrow's Republican.

A reputation once broken may possibly be repaired, but the world will always keep their eyes on the spot where the crack was.

MARK A. SMITH ON HIS RECORD

United States Senator Tells One Thousand People Why He Should Be the Nominee of Democrats to Succeed Himself

Mildly ridiculing his enemies, discouraging on his record and prospects to his friends, and paying the finest tribute ever heard here to Woodrow Wilson the statesman, Honorable M. A. Smith, candidate for re-election to the United States senate, addressed a thousand people in the Y. M. C. A. stadium last night. John Orme, in making his opening address said Mr. Smith's talk would not be essentially a political one—and it was not—except in spots. It ranged from the humorous to the vigorous, and proved beyond all doubt, that, although the veteran has lost somewhat of his stentorian voice, he is still that same strong outdoor speaker who has held the attention of Arizona audiences for the past twenty years.

The speaker could not very well avoid boasting of his work in the senate, and his position as chairman of that very important arid lands committee to do still more for this state. But he excused what he termed "seeming egotism" by pointing out the occasion, and the opportunity—which were both too good to be lost.

Mr. Orme said that Mr. Smith would explain the workings of the time extension bill.

"It was very hard to prevent Arizona getting the worst of it—interest at a rate of three or four per cent on deferred payments, and practically only two years of real grace," said the senator. "The first bill, as I pointed out to my conferees would not benefit Arizona, but would possibly burden the water users of this state with a debt they might never be able to pay."

He explained how the bill was drafted, the conferences with the secretary of the interior, and with the Salt River valley delegation. The most notable point he brought out, was that of the appropriation provision, saddled on the bill by the house, and upheld by the house division of the joint committee against the most vigorous opposition of the senate.

"We all believed firmly that the money in the reclamation fund should not be divided by the committee. If we are not careful, this money will be distributed out of the—the what you call it? The 'hog-barrel—the 'pork-barrel!'"

"If I am not returned to the senate, or if I should die in the middle of my term, the chairmanship of this committee on arid lands goes to the second man on it, Senator Lane of Oregon. And how 'well, do you think, we will fare in this hot dry Arizona against the prejudice of rain soaked Oregon?"

The senator spoke on the importance of the chairmanship to Arizona at this time. "His power is almost limitless. He calls the committee or he calls it off, just as he sees fit. Arizona has drawn from the reclamation fund nearly sixteen millions of dollars, and has paid back less than a million. Oregon has put in ten dollars for one withdrawn."

Mr. Smith kidded Reese Ling, at first referring to him as "one of my opponents," and later, thinking better of it and calling him by name.

"I must refer to the inference of one of my opponents—and this will probably be my only allusion to this matter in all my campaigns—He that he inferred I was being led by the corporations!"

Then came some mild ridicule, already referred to.

John O. Dunbar, not by name, but by inference, as the publisher of "some of those printed sheets, thrown about the streets," also came in for mention.

"So I have drawn something like seven hundred thousand dollars from the public till? Well, not one dollar has crossed that (uplifted) palm except salary."

To the women, who were numerous in the assemblage:

"If the men haven't common sense enough to know whether I should—or deserve to go back, thank God, the women have!"

Again at Mr. Ling.

"One of the first references made to me by Ling was that regarding my age. Experience, which comes only with age, is a thing that must be possessed by a successful representative in the United States senate.

"I have been accused of drinking whiskey and smoking cigars in the cloak rooms, when I should have been in the chamber. As to this, Ling is as mistaken concerning those peculiar, historical senatorial facts as he usually is."

On the condition of the United States:

"President Wilson has in his heart a deep and abiding determination to right the wrongs of the common people. He is the best president we have had since Lincoln.

"Europe is now a sea of blood. Dante's Inferno failed to grasp a picture such as Europe displays today. And supreme in the midst of all this strife, the greatest nation on earth stands at absolute peace with the world. What must the historians say of the trials and temptations of the president to go into Mexico! But the twentieth century is no time for the greatest nation to crush a smaller one."

Mr. Smith told why he stood with the president on the tolls exemption bill, believing that to exempt coastwise shipping from paying a share in the upkeep of the canal would be playing into the hands of the greatest shipping monopoly in the world.

After the speaking, Mr. Smith held an impromptu reception in the reading room of the Y. M. C. A. and many of those who had heard him speak came in to meet him.

A KINDLY WORD FOR DOGS

Rabies Declared a Germ Disease Not Produced by Hot Weather

The Journal of the American Medical association speaks a kindly word for the overheated dog and soothes the fears of those who look for their pets and the pets of others to become rabid while the mercury is high. The term dog days, it is pointed out, comes from Roman times and relates to the rising of the Dog Star, Sirius, simultaneously with the sun during the hottest period of the year.

Hot weather does not produce rabies, which is a germ disease, communicated only through the saliva of infected animals. Statistics show that it is slightly more prevalent in early spring than at any other season, probably because dogs and men, pent up all winter, are moving about to a greater extent. Through elimination of its victims, rabies actually decreases as hot weather approaches.

If dogs are to be muzzled, medical authorities point out, they should be muzzled constantly and not simply in mid-summer.

The direct rays of the sun often produce in young and nervous dogs a violent seizure in which the animal snaps and barks, trying to hide itself as though in terror. Rest in a cool dark place brings prompt recovery, but many a dog has been killed spectacularly while in one of these fits.

Dogs that have bitten persons or other dogs and are suspected of having rabies should not be killed unless they are unmanageable. The police department of a veterinary should keep such a dog confined under observation to make a diagnosis. If the dog is killed, its brain and spinal cord should be sent to the university laboratory. Early use of the Pasteur treatment is effective insurance against the development of the disease.—Detroit News.
