Mitchell, of Oregon, who was convicted on July 26, 1905, in the circuit court of his state of a violation of the law of the revised statutes to the effect that: "No senator, after his election, and during his continuance in office, shall receive or agree to receive any compensation, directly or indirectly, for any services rendered or to be rendered to any parties, in relation to any pursuit in which the United States is a party, directly or indirectly interested."
