Perils of Pauline

The program at the Lion Theater today is composed of two features and two one-reel comedies making a show that is worth seeing. The headliner is the Perils of Pauline and in this episode Pauline's dog takes an active part. The other feature is a two-reel majestic drama entitled "Out of the Air," which will give the audience a thrill when a man drops from an aeroplane on a moving train. This fact will stand for many a day in movie circles as one of the most dangerous ever performed. A comedy called "The Mascot" will entertain, while the Keystone comedy, "He Loves the Ladies" will bring forth roars of laughter. Expressed in a few words, it's a good all-around program. Friday the Lion shows James Cruze in "Cardinal Richelieu's Ward" from the story by Bulwer Lytton.

Columbia

The second performance of "Tommy Jones" proved that the musical patrons of Phoenix will turn out to see a performance of merit no matter what the condition of weather. The show is too well balanced to find a spot to pick as the feature, but the "Tipperary" song by Miss Drena Mack and chorus scored again with those who braved the elements to give the skit the once over. The song is the catchiest thing that has been offered in any musical show this year and will be whistled long after the piece itself is forgotten. Tonight will see the final performance of the acknowledged best play of the year in Phoenix.

Empress

No theme of the fiction writer has been worked as much as that of the southern maid with the northern lover in the civil war days and yet it is a theme that never grows old, here is so much romance in the most of us that we will follow with avidity and brain child of some modicum of fiction when he or she has delved into the war that allied brother against brother. At the Empress tonight Manager O'Grady will offer a Kluge and Erlanger Biograph master work, "The Fair Rebel," disclosing a tale of a maid of the southland and a lover of the blue clad army. The story is said to be one of the most charming ever woven around the stirring days of the war and with the screening that this great firm of picture builders have given it there is little left to be said save, "it must be worth while." "The Fair Rebel" will be the offering for tonight and tomorrow.

The Regale

The fifth installment of the exceptional serial film story, "The Troy O'Hearts," will be given the final showing today at the Regale Theater, 210-212 East Washington street. The two reels of this installment were shown yesterday and won new friends for the moving picture house and for the story which has been appearing in The Republican each Sunday morning. "A Ragged Knight," a two-reel Victor with Florence Lawrence in the leading role, is well worth the leading place on any program. "The Undertow," a Powers drama, gives promise of being interesting. "Troublesome Pets," a Sterling comedy, will insure enough laughs to place even the gronchiest spectator in good humor.

The Lamara

"The Blue Flame" is the title of a two-reel feature that will lead the program at the Lamara theater today and tomorrow. It is a Selig and was constructed at the great Los Angeles studios of that organization. There will be five thousand feet of film shown altogether, the other three thousand feet being made up of a single comedy Lubin, "Jinks the Barber," and Edison single, "Buster Brown Gets the Worst of It," and a Biograph, "Her Doggie." MINE CONGRESS OFFICERS WILL BE HERE THIS WEEK

Secretary Callbreath and Dr. Holmes, Directors of the Federal Bureau of Mines, Will Be First to Reach Convention City

PRESIDENT SHOLZ COMES SATURDAY

Some of Most Important Mine Experts, Owners and Directors of Federal Bureaus Will Be on List of Visitors Next Week

Secretary James E. Callbreath Jr. of the American Mining congress will be here with Dr. Joseph A. Holmes, director of the bureau of mines Thursday, according to Assistant Secretary E. L. Wakcott. With the arrival of the secretary, delegates will begin streaming into Phoenix for the seventeenth annual session of the great association of mine owners and experts. Not since the American National Live Stock association assembled here last January, has Phoenix—Arizona—been host to such an important congress. The mine congress is the third national organization that has selected Phoenix as its meeting place, the other one being the National Irrigation congress, which met here a number of years ago.

Messrs. Callbreath and Holmes have stopped off at Fort Bayard, N. M., to inspect properties there, and will be here Thursday. On Saturday, the retiring president, Carl Sholz of Chicago, will arrive with a delegation of eastern mining men, and at various times between now and Monday, there will be scores of other nationally known engineers, directors of bureaus and heads of mining companies coming in. Dr. W. Brumton, second vice-president, Samuel A. Taylor, a former president, and John Bern, another former presiding officer, will arrive from Denver and the east.

Copies of the official program were received from Washington yesterday. The program, which was published exclusively in The Republican last week, forms the basis for this attractive little pamphlet, which is enriched by articles and notices, and illustrated with pictures of the officers. Prominent among the contributions are articles on "Arizona, Past and Present" by W. E. DeWitt, mining editor of The Republican and on "Phoenix, Arizona," by Harry Welch, secretary of the board of trade.

The mining congress will open the way to great publicity for some of Arizona's immense mine resources. Attention will be called to some districts that have never been studied, but whose richness is such that they will, one day, surprise the world. In addition, the influence of the congress will be used to bring to this state stations for mine experimentation, for mine rescue and similar allied works of the federal bureau of mines. The mine rescue car from the Colorado district is already on its way. It will be viewed by thousands on demonstration day, Friday.

An Arizona man will be named as one of the vice presidents, but just who will receive this honor is not known. It will be up to the Arizona delegation to select their representative in the official family.

own daughter is largely engaged bringing the cruelty and falsity of the position taken by the old man and he sends men to bring young Stewart back. "The finale is a great one."

At the Coliseum

Although somewhat damp outside, the weather in no way dampened the ardor of the audience which greeted the new show at the Coliseum last night. A two reel Thanhouser "A Messenger of Death" started the ball rolling. The Danmore Brothers were the first to appear in the vaudeville program and when it comes to handling piano accordions, these boys are there, offering everything from grand opera to ragtime. They were forced to respond to repeated encores.

The Twirling Tailcoats offer excellent work on the flying rings and keep the audience supplied with plenty of thrills working with ease and grace.

Frawley and Rath, "A man, a piano, and a nut" are some team and when it comes to manipulating the torvis, the pianist of this team is a bear, and it will be a long time before Phoenix will see his equal. The "nut" members comes in for his share, working in a manner full his own, assisted by a series of hats, his rendition of several songs, brought him well earned applause. A one reel Mutual drama and a Keystone side-splitter, "The Gambling Rube," closed an excellent bill and if the future closes can be judged from the first two weeks, this house is sure to become a winner.

FOR MALONEY'S BIRTHDAY

John J. Birdno and James P. Lavin entertained Tom Maloney at a birthday dinner at the Arizona club yesterday noon. Mr. Maloney, who is purchasing agent for the reclamation service, is president of the Jefferson club. He is 65 years old, and still a hearty, active man. Those present were Mr. Maloney, Mr. Lavin, Mr. Birdno and Walter Wilson.

NEW ADDITION TO BE ALMOST FIREPROOF

Specifications for the new addition to the Pioneers' Home at Prescott, made possible by the Parsons' bequest, have been adopted by the board of control, and plans conforming with them will be prepared at once.

The specifications call for what is known as "slow-burning" construction, a modification of the fireproof type of building. The new addition will have firewalls and fire doors between different departments, and asbestos sheets will be laid under all the floors. The stairway will be of concrete with wooden treads. Metal lath and Douglas plaster will be used throughout in the construction.

William Brophy of Navajo county and Andrew Stark of Maricopa were admitted to the home yesterday.

Weather Beats Weather Man To His Snow Study

Briggs Plans Start for Sierras Anchas to Set Additional Snow Measuring Instruments and Snow-falls During Storm That Covers Salt River Valley Seven Hundredths of an Inch Deep in Cold But Useful Rain—Snow-fall Data Proving Very Useful to Students of Water Supply Situation

Snow-Student R. R. Briggs. Whether last night's rain had any effect on the plans of Section Director Robert R. Briggs of the United States weather bureau, is not known, but it is known that Mr. Briggs had planned to make a special trip to the Sierras gineer, S. K. Baker, to set snow stakes in the White Mountains. The heavy snows which beat the engineers to it, prevented them from surveying all that territory contemplated in their plan. So this year, it is necessary to extend the line of "stakes" somewhat, in order to Anchas, to study the snow situation. He planned to take his departure today.

When the local weather headquarters started last year to make a systematic study of snowfall in the watershed of the Roosevelt irrigation system, Mr. Briggs sent his assistant Kenneth Meaker and a reclamation en-get in the other important mountain range, the Sierras Anchas. Mr. Briggs contemplated making the trip by auto in order to reach the depths of the hills before the snow should start in earnest. From reports received from Roosevelt last night, however, the snow has already begun falling heavily all over

The watershed. The study of snow fall has been greatly encouraged by the department of agriculture, which directs the weather bureau. Data on the amount of fall, the manner and the amount of melting and the consequent additions to stored water supply are proving very valuable in this instance, as it gives a line on water supply not secured in any other way.
