WIGWAGGING ON SHIPBOARD.
Brooklyn Girl Applies a Signal to the War Vessel's Curve Calculator.
A clever Brooklyn girl, who was by no means an unsophisticated in naval matters as she appeared to be, was piloted over one of the fighting ships at the navy yard a few months ago by a young ensign, who made the most of his opportunity. He told her how deadly the torpedoes were, and he thought it no harm to double their effectiveness in the telling.
"When one of these torpedoes explodes," said the ensign, "it kills all the fish within a radius of half a mile, and frequently its force is so great that the bottom of the sea is laid bare." "How very interesting," said the Brooklyn girl, "and I suppose you have seen the bottom of the sea frequently."
"Well, you see, I never, I have never been detailed for torpedo practice," said the ensign evasively. The ensign told the Brooklyn girl that the six-inch guns on board were constructed on the principle which is so beautifully illustrated by the baseball pitcher, and that they could be gauged to throw any kind of a curve.
"That must be a great advantage," said the girl, thoughtfully.
"Indeed it is," said the ensign. "It permits all of our guns to go into action at the same time. When, for instance, the starboard guns get the range and begin firing, the captain passes the word to the gunners on the port side: 'Get on to your curves.' This well-known order, by the way, is the original of the now current slang expression."
"What happens then?" asked the Brooklyn girl, anxiously.
"Then," continued the ensign, thoughtfully, "the best mathematician on the ship is assigned to calculate the curves. That is my duty now. The curve calculator, knowing the range given to the starboard guns, calculates the curve and range for each port gun, and the gunners gauge according to it.
Thus, you see, while the starboard guns are firing straight at the enemy the port guns are throwing projectiles in a curve around the bow and stern of the ship."
"But if these projectiles are not stopped in their course, isn't there danger that they may complete the circle and come back and hit the ship?" asked the Brooklyn girl.
"That all depends on the curve calculator," said the ensign, proudly.
The Brooklyn girl looked at him as if she had been profoundly impressed or tremendously amused, and the ensign decided in favor of the former interpretation. He escorted the Brooklyn girl about the deck, and suddenly she saw a commotion on the flag-ship, which was anchored about 600 yards away. A sailor was waving a flag back and forth, and a man on the ensign's ship seemed to be watching it with interest.
"What are these two men doing?" she asked.
"They are wigwagging."
"Dear me, is that a form of naval punishment?"
"No, indeed," said the ensign; "that ship over there is the admiral's flag-ship, and the man who is waving a flag is sending an important order from the admiral to this ship."
"Can you read it?" asked the girl.
"It is too late to catch the full order now," said the ensign, "but we will hear the signalman report it to the officer of the deck. It may be an order to prepare for war at once."
The Brooklyn girl tried hard to look impressed by this martial suggestion as she accompanied the ensign to where the officer of the deck was standing.
The signalman had completed the message, and coming to the officer of the deck, he stopped, saluted, and said:
"An order from the flag-ship, sir."
"What is it?" said the officer, acknowledging the salute.
"Scrub at discretion, sir," said the signalman, and saluting, he walked away.
The ensign's expression was blank, and the Brooklyn girl laughed.
"Thank you very much for your kindness," she said. "I know that, after that order from the admiral, you, as official curve calculator, will have work to do, so I will join my friends ashore." This ensign had been suspicious of ingenious Brooklyn girls who have since visited his ship, and he has congratulated himself that the wardrobe mess knew nothing about the incident.—N.
Y. Sun.

CARTRIDGES IN SILK.
A Number of Very Excellent Improve- ments Made in the Maxim Gun.
Hiram Maxim recently informed the Daily Mail representative that the British government had given his firm an order for their new gun, which have a greatly increased firing speed and 50 per cent. more penetrating power than those hitherto constructed.
The United States had already ordered from Messrs. Vickers' Sons & Maxim a large number of these 12-inch guns, and in reference to this Mr. Maxim said: "This last order is being supplied entirely by our factories in America, on account of the neutrality laws, which would prevent the weapons being shipped if made at the firm's works in Sheffield."
"We have made," said Mr. Maxim, "a good many 6-inch and 12-inch guns for the British government, but these were made from government specifications, using government mechanism, but upon showing the government officials something better we have been given large orders for guns made with our improved mechanism, and this work is being executed at the present moment."
"The statement that our 12-inch gun fires at the rate of three shots a minute," he continued, "is substantially true. This, however, does not mean that it can be steadily fired at that rate. It might be done for the first minute, commencing with the gun loaded. One thing you can rely upon, and that is that our 12-inch and 6-inch guns are superior to any guns that have yet been invented, both in power and in rate of firing. Any nation using our new high-power 6-inch and 12-inch guns can rest secure that they will never encounter anything that will shoot faster or with any greater penetrating power."
"The chief features in the new gun are an improved breech-block and the substitution of an asbestos case for the metal cartridge formerly used. The usual breech-block requires several turns to hold it safely in position after the charge has been inserted. This loss of time is obviated by a mechanical alteration that gives the same solidity with but a single twist of the block. The cartridge and projectile are held together in a silk lining, incased in asbestos, thus saving weight and magazine room."
"The gay new 6-inch gun was tried at Portsmouth the perforation implied, according to Trevellick's formula, was 22.7 inches of iron, the greatest perforation laid down in the service table for a 6-inch gun being 12.9 of iron. The rate of fire maintained by this gun, at a subsequent trial, at Shoeburyness, was 26 rounds in four minutes 47 seconds, which was equal to a shot every eight seconds, or, allowing for cooling, 100 shots in 15 minutes."—Chicago Journal.

ANCIENT CUBAN ATROCITIES.
Over Populous Districts Were Thinned
Out by the Most Brutal
Butcheries.
On one occasion the queen of a too populous district was invited to visit the camp of Gov. Ovando to witness a tilting match of the Spanish cavalry, and accompanied with 78 caciques, or tributary chieftains, followed by a vast multitude of flower-crowned sightseers. At noon all were assembled, "upon which," says the chronicler of Valcarras, "Orlando gave a signal; and instantly the horsemen rush into the midst of the naked and defenseless troop, trampling them under foot, cutting them down with their swords, and sparing neither age nor sex. The caciques, assembled in one of the principal houses, were bound to the posts which supported the roof and put to cruel tortures, until, in the extremity of their anguish, they were made to admit the truth of all and any charges, and a horrible punishment was inflicted on the spot; fire was set to the house and they all perished miserably in the flames."
Fugitives were hunted down with bloodhounds. In addition to slave dealers, slave trainers, and slave task-masters, the planters employed a complete set of man-hunters who trained a breed of ferocious hounds for the especial purpose of recapturing deserters, who were generally dragged back to their owners and knotted to death in the presence of their fellow captives as an example in terrorism.
An epidemic of suicide supervened, and in less than 80 years a population variously estimated from 3,500,000 to 5,000, 000 had become entirely extinct.— Felix L. Oswald, in Chautauquan.

itants, has only one leather shoe factory. Nearly all the natives still wear sandals of straw or wood.—Albany Ar-

A Dismal Outlook.
Clara—Why did you refuse that rich widower? They say he has his life insured for a million.
Mabel—I know it; but he confessed to me in an unguarded moment that both his father and mother lived to be over 90.—Chicago Evening News.
There is at present in London a German prince, Max of Saxony, who has renounced his right of succession to the throne of his country and entered the Catholic priesthood. The prince recently preached an eloquent sermon in Whitechapel and said he should devote his life to parochial work.
