

AMERICA OBLIGED TO LIVE UP TO HER CHARACTER

France and England Have Unbounded Admiration for This Country, Says Dean Emery

"France and England have an unbounded admiration for America and all things American," declared Dean Emery, special organizer and staff man for the United War Work campaign, to a group of Warren district men at a session held in the Commercial club rooms yesterday afternoon. "And for my part," continued the speaker, "when the folks have an unbounded admiration for me, I am not all set up about it; rather I am always afraid I will disappoint them. America must live up to her splendid reputation achieved abroad. Her war works have been the wonder of Europe." Nothing like them have ever been known or dreamed of over there before. Our care and treatment of our own soldiers and our kindness and many benefactions for all our allies and their women and children have amazed them and filled them with admiration and affection for our great and generous national heart. They believe we can do anything, and do it better than any one else.

"In the very beginning of the war France saw our Y. M. C. A. work, and said, 'We want the same thing; not an imitation, but the real article. We will furnish the huts and the attendants and the equipment, but we want you to furnish the secretaries; the idea; we want it to be the same work in spirit as well as in actuality.' The Y was the first in the field, that is all. And after the two Y associations came the Knights of Columbus and the Jewish organizations and the rest of the seven great war works that the world has admired and the government of the United States has recognized and given official standing as a necessary part of the war.

"The great drive for the United War work fund will soon begin, and I am sent here to try to tell you how fine and how necessary is this work for our soldier boys in camp here and in field over there. I wish I could tell you half of it, but the scope and the wonder of that work is beyond any man's telling and it would take too long."

"He's a man in a thousand to carry this message," said Mr. Emery. Pleasant, plain, forceful, speaking straight out in a language all can understand, he goes right to the heart of the matter, better still, he makes people believe that he believes what he says. He is a New Yorker, but he speaks the southwest language. He fairly glowed while he told of the fine welcome he had had everywhere in the southwest. It was a revelation to him.

"They say to me everywhere down here," he declared, "tell us our quota and we will raise it. Up in Flagstaff the other day the mayor became half indignant because I was sent to his town to stir up interest in this work. He told me to move on. They would raise their quota, he declared, of their own effort and accord. Of course, he was joking me, and they treated me fine up there, but it was their spirit of which I am trying to tell you today."

The speaker spoke from his heart when he said: "It will be easier to raise this fund at this time for this work than anything the people have been asked to do yet for this war. Easier than it was to sell Liberty bonds at 4 1/2 per cent interest and on gilt-edged, Gibraltar security. The boys for whose comfort and happiness we are raising this money have been tried since the last drive and not found wanting over there. They have made good. Belleau wood and Chateau-Thierry and the Marne and Et. Mihiel and the Meuse and Cambrai and the Champagne have all been written in the book of glory since then by these boys; written with their blood on the points of their bayonets.

"Instead of seven separate drives for funds by all these seven war work organizations, this is one drive for the seven. They are working together, these seven, hand in glove; no overlapping, and still they cannot do all there is to do. There is a Y. W. rest room now with every base hospital in France. The Knights of Columbus are doing a grand work over there. They just sent Johnny Evers, the famous ball player, over as one of their secretaries and he is teaching Gen. Petain our national game and the general has ordered it played in all the French military schools and camps. You remember the famous expression in fandoom about the old Chicago Cub team—from Evers to Tinker to Chance? Well, it is from America to Evers to France, now. And the Salvation army lassies. Ah, our boys will always cherish their blessed memory, and their cooking, too, and their courage under fire. The Jewish organizations are as devoted and efficient as they always are in all they do, and all the others. It would take me the rest of the day and night to begin to tell you a small part of this work."

Full particulars of the organization and quota and other matters in regard to this United War Work campaign are printed elsewhere in this issue. G. H. Dowell, county chairman, who presided at the meeting yesterday afternoon, in thanking Mr. Emery for his splendid and inspiring talk, declared that the educational work in connection with this campaign would begin at once, as all details had been worked out, and that the actual drive would start soon thereafter. "and we will go over the top, too," Mr. Dowell assured the meeting. "Important as this work is now during the war, it will be more important still immediately following peace. That will be the most critical time of all for our boys over there. With the war yet to win they have a high ideal and a direct incentive before them to keep in their best condition and do their best, but with peace and the year or more of time that it will require for demobilization, they will need the aid and guide and cheer and comfort of our war work more than ever. And our organization is planning even now the part it must play at that time."

erings still remains indefinite and uncertain. Pueblo appeared to be the heaviest sufferer from the epidemic, reporting to the state health board a total of 214 new cases; a figure in excess of the denver total of 206. Deaths from the disease in each city today totaled 12. A Leadville report to the effect that but four new cases had been discovered and the absence of excessive figures from other mining centers led to the hope that the worst of the epidemic was passed in the mountain districts.

PHOENIX PHYSICIAN DIES FROM EFFECTS OF SPANISH FLU

WAS IN BISBEE FEW WEEKS AGO TO ASSIST IN EXAMINATION OF REGISTRANTS AT "Y" — MAY HAVE CONTRACTED DISEASE HERE

According to a copy of the Phoenix Republican, which arrived here yesterday, Dr. P. R. Doron, a prominent physician of that city, died on Sunday morning of an attack of influenza. The doctor was in Bisbee a few weeks ago with a number of other physicians to assist in the examination of the registered men and made a number of friends who will regret to hear of his death. It was the belief of the doctor that he contracted the disease while he was in this city. The story as printed in the Republican is as follows:

"Dr. P. R. Doron, 412 North Seventh avenue, who died Sunday morning of Spanish influenza, gave up his life for his country, according to the local board yesterday.

"Dr. Doron contracted influenza while at Bisbee with several other Phoenix physicians last week. The doctors went to Bisbee to assist Cochise county physicians in making physical examination of men registered there for military service.

"Dr. Doron was among the first of the physicians of Maricopa county to volunteer his services to the government when the call came for medical men to examine registrants. He was present at many of the examinations the past several months and was held in high esteem by all of the medical fraternity of the county for his excellent judgment and skill.

"This faithful physician died without having made ample provision for his family, according to Secretary Martin T. Weyant of the local board, who has asked the medical association and other public-spirited organizations to give this matter full consideration.

"Two sisters of Mrs. Doron will reach Phoenix today from Los Angeles to attend the funeral, the time of which had not been decided upon last night."

PEACE RESTS WITH ALLIED WAR COUNCIL

sador Rino of Spain informing him that the Turkish request that he propose an armistice and peace negotiations, delivered by the ambassador, October 14, had been transmitted by the president to the governments at war with Turkey. Later the secretary announced that the last Austrian communication supporting a similar appeal with acceptance of the stipulation of complete independence for subject nationalities, had been forwarded to America's co-belligerents. Minister Ekengren of Sweden, in charge of Austrian interests was so informed verbally, the president apparently having decided that it was unnecessary to send the written reply he was reported yesterday to be preparing.

One Unanswered Note

This leaves one note unanswered, that of Count Andrássy, the Austrian foreign minister, asking Secretary Lansing to intervene with the president for favorable action on Austria's request. Since the president already has acted Mr. Lansing probably will make no reply.

Great satisfaction over the day's developments was evident everywhere here. American and allied military men expressed the opinion that the only question now is whether Germany will seek to delay the inevitable by fighting a desperate defensive campaign alone, or accept the surrender terms now being framed.

With Turkey and Bulgaria out of the war and the Dardanelles and the Bosphorus in the hands of the allies Germany's hold on the east is broken. Guard duty is the work left for the military forces the allies may consider necessary to keep. For the allied navies there remains the job of capturing or wiping out the German-controlled fleet on the Black sea. No one believes that will take long.

Are Officially Ignored

Officially neither the Washington government nor the allied embassies had been informed of the day's events. Only through press dispatches did they learn of the fall of Turkey, and they had no information through their own channels of the reported action of the Austrian commander on the Italian front in applying directly to General Diaz, the Italian commander in chief, for an armistice.

President Wilson spent a large part of the afternoon at the state, war and navy buildings in the offices of Secretaries Lansing and Baker. He walked over from the White House soon after word came of Turkey's collapse, but there were indications that his talk with the war and state secretaries had not so much to do with the interesting events on the battle fronts as with the exchanges constantly going on between the president and Colonel House and the American representatives on the supreme war council.

President Smiles Broadly

When he left Secretary Lansing's office late in the afternoon with secretary Baker, President Wilson wore a broad smile. He remarked as he emerged into the hall, crowded with two score newspaper men, "this seems to be a very curious crowd," but he said nothing to satisfy the curiosity of the correspondents.

The disposition of European Turkey and the Dardanelles is a question brought suddenly to the front by the armistice which has ended Turkey's career as an ally of Germany. One thing is regarded here as virtually certain—the Dardanelles will never again be under the domination of Turkey.

Great Britain and France are determined upon this and the American government has voiced its approval of their position.

FIRE DAMAGE TO SUPPLIES QUITE HEAVY YESTERDAY

the fire became visible and efforts to fight it were made by the few men on the grounds. However, before a stream could be gotten on it the extremely inflammable material in the north end of the building was ablaze and fire broke through the roof. Both the Bisbee and Lowell fire departments were called, the Bisbee department arriving in very short time and proceeded to set up its pump which gave good pressure on one line. This was responsible chiefly for the failure of the fire to spread to other buildings. The Lowell shaft house was in intimate danger, while only the hard work of firemen kept the flames from spreading to the timber yard, where many thousands of dollars worth of mine timbers were piled. The absence of a breeze also helped save the situation when the south end of the building was attacked by the fire and it appeared for a time that there was danger of it leaping the gap between the supply and oil house, where quantities of oil and gasoline were stored.

As the flames attacked carboys of chemicals stored in the building and the containers were broken there came a series of explosions ranging in intensity from the force of a small mine bullet to much heavier ones. Gas, generated by the chemicals, mounted in hot, white flame, melting the corrugated iron and consuming it as though it had been paper.

Within an hour the fire was entirely under control and when the whistle blew for the morning shift to go on duty a large gang of Mexicans was at work clearing away such of the debris as was sufficiently cool to be handled, while water was poured on the flames from the several lines of hose.

That the fire did not spread to the Lowell shaft was considered by the fire fighters extremely fortunate as there was the double chance of its going by way of the shaft house and by a tunnel which connects with the shaft from the timber yard. The firemen, both regulars and volunteer, deserve high credit for their work. But for a lack of water pressure in the beginning better work could have been done. As it was, they did all that men could be expected to accomplish, even saving the wooden platform which ran around the building on the outside.

The burning of the supply department very probably will create a bad condition in the company properties for the time being, as many of the supplies probably will be exceedingly difficult if not impossible of replacement under existing war conditions. However, every effort will be made by the company to maintain normal working conditions, despite the difficulties inherent in the situation.

J. J. Jones, chief of the Lowell fire department, stated yesterday that he wished to thank the Bisbee department for responding to the alarm and assisting so materially in fighting the fire.

ent democratic majority in the house has been subservient to the will of the president in every respect except when critical issues in the conduct of the war have been involved. The president has not hesitated publicly to discipline those of his party who have disagreed with him and the lesson had its effect.

"A new democratic congress with its old leaders thus chastened, will offer no opposition to his will. In a democratic congress the American people will not have the service of an independent, courageous, co-ordinate branch of the government to moderate Mr. Wilson's uncontrolled will.

"It is not safe to entrust to one man such unlimited powers.

"It is not in accord with the traditions of the republic.

"The republicans voted without objection billions to be expended by this administration. Six hundred and forty millions for aviation were given to the executive to build airplanes without a single limitation as to the manner or method of its expenditure. A senate committee has deplored the waste and failure in the use of that money. The debts which have been created by this war, the people will be paying to the third and fourth generations. They have a right to know how these enormous sums have been expended. Only a republican congress will have the courage to exact a detailed and accurate story of that stewardship."

and in conveying information to Mr. Taibot in an improper manner, with respect to the transaction of business between that company and the division of the signal corps of which Colonel Deeds was the head; (2) in giving to the representatives of the committee on public information a false and misleading statement with regard to the progress of aircraft production for the purpose of publication with the authority of the secretary of war.

"The absence of proper appreciation of the obvious impropriety of transactions by government officers and agents with firms or corporations in which they are interested, compels the conclusion that public policy demands that the statutory provisions bearing upon this conduct should be strictly enforced. It is therefore recommended that the officers found to have transactions on behalf of the pecuniary profits of which they had an interest, should be prosecuted under section 41 of the criminal code.

The federal trade commission should be requested to report on the proper cost of mahogany for airplane propellers, to the end that upon the coming in of its report the question of the propriety of further action with respect to the transactions of the mahogany manufacturers and importers association may be determined.

"It is recommended that the representatives of the department of justice should keep in touch with the progress of the re-audit of accounts so that it may be advised of the complete enforcement of the rights of the government in final settlement of accounts.

"Permit me also to suggest that a special division, or sub-division of the present bureau of investigation in the department of justice should be assigned to the consideration of suggested delinquencies in connection with aircraft production so that the work already done may be appropriately followed up. In particular, it is recommended that the activities in relation to spruce production, which being largely centered on the Pacific coast it was impracticable to embrace in the present inquiry, should be carefully scrutinized."

JUROR REVEALED ACTION CHARGED

(By Review Leased Wire)

NEW YORK, Oct. 31.—Upon his confession of revealing to Truman H. Newberry, U. S. N. R., the result of a secret ballot of the grand jury which is investigating expenditures in the Newberry republican primary campaign in Michigan, Abner T. Bowen, a member of the jury, was excused from the panel today. Bowen told Lieut. Com. Newberry that the grand jury had declined to indict him on a charge of violating the federal corrupt practices act.

Bowen was arraigned on a presentment based on a statement in a New York newspaper telling of disclosures made to Commander Newberry by a member of the grand jury, and on an admission by Bowen before the jury that it was he who had made the disclosures. The court deferred action on the presentment until next Thursday.

According to the newspaper, Bowen called at the office of the commandant of the Third Naval district, where Mr. Newberry, former secretary of the navy, is assistant to Rear Admiral Usher, introduced himself as a member of the grand jury and said that the jury had refused to indict the commandant.

Despite the refusal of the grand jury to take action on the government's complaint regarding expenditures of the Newberry committee, as reported by Bowen, the inquiry has not been finished. Through a court order extending the session of the jury until November 18, federal attorneys hope to be able to present further evidence in the case, provided the supreme court sustains District Judge Cushman in his order that three members of the campaign committee be compelled to testify.
