RIDDERZALL, SCENE OF THE HAGUE CONFERENCE.

The attention of civilized man is now centered upon the quaint old edifice called the Ridderzall, or Hall of the Knights, at The Hague, Holland, where the sessions of the international arbitration and peace conference are held. Practically every civilized nation is represented at this conference, which is expected to result in definite plans looking toward the future settlement of international disputes by arbitration instead of by war.

Pointed Paragraphs

A real good man doesn't have to use words to tell it. Professional pugilists carry their fortunes in their fists. Falling in love is almost as easy as falling out again. To the tramp every man looks like an enemy—except another tramp. The bleached blonde's method of keeping her hair light is a dark secret. The worst thing about work is that some men do too much and others not enough.—Chicago News.
