NEWS BUDGET FROM SAFFORD

SAFFORD, January 25.—On Saturday evening Mrs. James M. Foster was hostess at a dinner party given complimentary to Mrs. J. C. Pursley of Long Beach, Cal. The table was decorated in bowls of fragrant California violets and a dainty arrangement of trailing myrtle. The center piece was a circular mirror, upon which stood silver candelabra aglow with five shining candles. A cluster of violets lay at each plate and the place cards were hand-painted designs in California poppies, poinsettias and violets. The plate favor of the guest of honor was a silver sugar shell in a poppy design. During the course of the dinner appropriate toasts were given by Mesdames Colton and French to the honoree and each subject was cleverly prefaced and introduced. Mrs. Pursley responded feelingly to the tributes of friendship. Wit and repartee made a delightful accompaniment to the ten course dinner. The personnel of the party included old time friends of the guest of honor and were: Mesdames French, Colton, Warner, Jennings, Prina, Henry Dial, Swift, Will Dial, Dowdle, Gertrude Anderson, B. F. HISTORY TOLD IN SLEEVES
Picturesque Styles Revive Memories of Famous Women

A day or two ago as I was walking through the crowded avenues among the throngs of women gaily picturesque in their charming winter toilettes, it struck me forcibly that more than one woman there was wearing quite unconsciously some bit of history—sordid, tragic, heroic, as the case might be—embellized on her sleeve, writes Edward La Fontaine in the February De-lin-eator.

It wasn't alone the Directoire and Empire periods.—"And who was 'Directoire'?" I heard a woman asking the other day, quite as if she were inquiring into the antecedents of the Elizabethan ruff or the Marie Antoinette fichu,—but the whole Moyen Age and the Renaissance that had come to life again.

The idea rather caught my fancy and I began to look for dead queens and forgotten favorites who doubtless swayed the fate of nations by the cut of their gowns or the coquetry of an elbow sleeve in days gone by.

I saw tall, stately Marguerite of Valois in gossamer—the new shade of red that is as old as the gooseberry from which it takes its name. Her sleeves were carefully buttoned along the outside down their entire length with gold buttons that should have borne the arms of Valois or Orleans. Perhaps they did, but I lost her at the entrance of the Ritz before I had a chance to ascertain.

I reread the dark, sinister history of Beatrice Cenci in the scallops of another sleeve before a laughing holiday face on its way to the skating rink. I passed Anne of Brittany in her favorite Beau-Troy enstallated on her sleeves from her elbow to her wrist. I saw a famous Creole beauty as Citoyenne Josephine Beauharnais in a small, close sleeve of unpretensions cut, as Madame Bonaparte, wife of the First Consul, in a leg-o'-mutton sleeve that looked quite modern till I saw that it buttoned to
