Loss of Sleep Charged to Comet by Night Wanders

Star Gazers Out in Force to See Tailstar in the Wee Hours

Poor old Halley's comet. This celestial vagabond which is now wandering through the heavens in sufficiently close proximity to this terrestrial sphere to make itself visible would curl its tail in shame if it knew of the many offenses laid at its door, and right here in Globe, too.

"Sis way m' dear," says the head of the family to his spouse as he sneaks in at 4 o'clock in the morning, "just been sitting up-his-with friends-like, waiting for that bloody old comet."

"Your pardon for being late," says the clerk to his boss as he comes in half an hour late, "but the neighbors kept me awake staying up to see the comet and I overslept."

"Orest, call, I gotta place to sleep, but I'm just stayin' out to git me peepers fixed on that comet," says the hobo as the night officer grabs him and marches him to the city tank.

These are only a few of the excuses which have been heard in Globe since that Halley wanderer made its appearance in the eastern sky.

As a matter of fact, the people of Globe are taking a bigger interest in Halley's comet than one might imagine. Just get up at 3 o'clock some of these mornings and take a stroll through the streets in the residence district. You won't be alone. Almost anywhere you will find sleepy students of astronomy scanning the sky for a glimpse of the comet.

Maybe there will be a single sky gazer in sight, maybe a whole family, down to a youngster just in school. More than likely you will hear the harsh jangle of an alarm clock in some nearby house warning a sleepy individual that the comet is on deck and that it is then to crawl out into the night air and take a look.

But it will be a matter of only a few days until this early rising or late retiring, as the case may be, will be unnecessary. In about a week the comet

ART DISPLAY OF HAIRDRESSERS

Novel Exhibition Opens at London Yesterday

LONDON, May 16—An exhibition of coiffures, probably the first of its kind to be held anywhere in the world, was opened today at the Prince's Skating club and will continue through the week. The exhibition is intended to bring about the adoption of a typical British fashion of hairdressing, so that the English woman and her American cousin may not be wholly dependent upon French styles, many of which are declared to be unsuitable for any but the features of Parisian women. Milliners as well as hairdressers are interested in the exhibition and are striving for the prizes offered to the person who devises the best all-British coiffure.

Prompt relief in all cases of throat and lung trouble if you use Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Pleasant to take, soothing and healing in effect. Sold by all druggists.
