Nicaragua canal and for gold standard legislation by this congress. Judge Barham was a member of the committee on interstate commerce in the last congress, and naturally will be glad to have the same assignment for the next two years.

Mrs. Joy, wife of the St. Louis congressman, feels a deep interest in the case of Mr. Roberts. In the hope of preventing Mr. Roberts from being sworn in, or of expelling him, if necessary, Mrs. Joy has prepared petitions for the signature of the wives of the representatives, regardless of party, and has sent them by mail to their addresses.

TWO MURDER CASES

Statements of Proceeding Filed With the Governor.

There were received at the office of the governor yesterday as the law directs in the cases of persons convicted of capital crimes, statements of the proceedings resulting in the conviction and sentencing to death of George Smiley in Navajo county, and Eugenio Mata in Apache county.

The petition is unsupported by other subscribers than Mata and is as follows: "Mr. Murphy—Dear Sir I sat down to write you this letter. I pray you to short my sentence to life prison. I beg to your Majesty to save me. I am innocent of the crime of which I was accused. I know my heart is clear. I am guilty of no crime because that was accidently. I never thought of such like that. I can swear before god in last moment of my life that I am innocent. I ask you to be kind short my sentence. You have all the power. Save my life if you please. I am alone in his. I am a poor boy and far away from home where nobody know me. I beg to have pity on me and save me from death. I hope you answer my letter as soon as possible.

The "accident" to which the petitioner alludes is the pointing of a gun, which he supposed was empty, at a little girl. It went off the charge passing through her throat and neck. The tragedy occurred at Springerville last summer. The victim was a thirteen-year-old girl, Bertha Wall, for whose parents Baca, a boy of nineteen, had been working almost a year. His theory of an accident is partially supported by one statement by all the witnesses for the territory, that after pointing the weapon at the girl the first time, he turned it aside and shot at a cartilage, after which he aimed again and the gun went off. The motive for the crime charged does not appear to be shown in the statement. If it should turn out that Mata should be hanged this will be the first instance on record of the fool with the empty gun having been brought to justice.

The case of Smiley is out of the ordinary. The defendant had pleaded guilty to an indictment for the murder of Peter McSweeney, a Santa Fe section foreman, for whom he had worked. McSweeney had been succeeded by another foreman leaving Smiley entitled to eight days' time. The new foreman could not give him the time because it had not been served under him. The old one could not, because he was without authority. Smiley says that seeing there was no other source of satisfaction he determined to kill McSweeney. They met and when McSweeney turned to run Smiley shot him. Smiley says he had no intention of shooting until McSweeney, after running a short distance, turned and put his hand behind him as if to draw a gun.

This statement was made after the plea of guilty was entered. Other witnesses were called and testified that the murder was brutal and unprovoked. Judgment was pronounced against him and the death sentence was imposed. Many courts have refused to accept pleas of guilty from persons accused of capital crimes, on the theory that a man cannot waive his constitutional right of trial by jury, when so much is at stake. No movement for a commutation of sentence or any other relief in behalf of Smiley has been made.

A LAND OF WEALTH

For ones Waiting for the Quickening of the Capital

Mr. M. E. Emerick of Chicago arrived in the city on Tuesday and is stopping at the Ford hotel. His visit to Phoenix will be brief, as he is en route from the state of Michigan, Mexico, and will leave for his eastern home in a day or two.

Mr. Emerick has traveled in nearly every state in the Mexican republic during the last two years and a half and talks very interestingly of its resources, its possibilities and its customs. He was sent out by Chicago capital to look up a profitable field of investment in the line of plantation property and after a thorough study of the resources of the country found what he believes to be the garden spot of the world. In the state above named, Purchase was made of 250,000 acres of land on the coast, almost due west of the City of Mexico, and a corporation was formed under the name of "Compania Hacienda Coahuayula," with a capital stock of $5,000,000.

The hacienda embraces lowland, upland, woodland, plain and mountain, and its resources are varied and almost beyond estimate. The company has now been in possession about one year and while the time has been too short to calculate results, Mr. Emerick says that thus far their accomplishments have been most gratifying and fortune certainly awaits their continued efforts. Some parts of the hacienda were cultivated previous to their ownership and these, with other areas, were planted to coffee trees. There are now 100,000 of them on the plantation and during the months of September and October 50,000 pounds of coffee were harvested.

Among other products cultivated are sugar cane, which is grown successfully and the company confidently expects to make 500,000 pounds of sugar next June. Cocoa is also enumerated and there are orchards or forests of whatever they may rightly be called, of coconut, vanilla and rubber trees, the latter growing prolifically, even though it is thousands of miles from the river Amazon, the great rubber producing country. In the mountain districts of the hacienda, too dry and rocky for cultivation, stock raising is carried on successfully. There is an abundance of water in the lowlands and on the company's property are three lagoons, two rivers and twelve small streams, beside many springs.

Another notable resource is the natural woods in that section. There are many acres of mahogany, black walnut, red cedar and two other valuable trees peculiar to that country, namely Primavera and Linaloa. There are also many valuable small-er trees not yet extensively known to commerce. All these beside being of utility in the conduct of the plantation, will some day prove valuable as an export.

As for the natural fruits of the country, they are many. The cattle thrive on native nuts or fruits and there are many from the delicious banana to others half as large as a watermelon that are a source of provision to the natives even though they have never been turned into the export trade of the state. Speaking of bananas, Mr. Emerick said there were many varieties and the best of them grow there prolifically. Fortune awaits the capitalist who will enter into the business of sending them north to California points, as they can more than compete with the east coast product, both in price and quality. Oranges are grown to some extent, but they are mostly sour and not a desirable article. Lemons are unknown, but a good variety of lime is easily raised. One would think that nature had been lavish when the foregoing is duly considered, but there are yet other resources. The mineral wealth of the country is a factor that should not be overlooked. There are notable outcroppings of copper, but the leads are undeveloped. One nice looking vein crops out on the company's property, but as yet it has not been prospected. A Pittsburg company has invested heavily in some gold claims not far distant and thus far they are most promising, while quite notable placer fields are being worked by the natives. Mr. Emerick expects in the near future to hear of some big mines being opened up.

American capital is rapidly finding its way in, though as yet the virgin wealth of the state, which he believes is one of the richest in the republic, in natural resources, is practically untouched. An American with $5,000 or $10,000, who has push and energy and who will go to that country firmly resolved to use business judgment, leaving his bad habits behind him, can in five years, he says, realize ten-fold on his investment. As for the native laboring classes, the wages paid on the Hacienda Coahuayula are 25 cents per day and rations, or 37 cents without rations, in Mexican silver money.

The district, as noted above, runs from the coast inland, and is about three days' journey overland from Coahuila, the capital of the state. Though the usual method of reaching this region is down the coast, though there is no established port at that place, there is a little harbor suitable for all purposes within a few miles. Leaving the plantation houses one can ride to the Pacific, take a dip in the salt water and return in half a day.
