Labby's Jubilee Lay.

(From the London Truth)

On this great day of fetes and feasts All men rejoice, then why not beasts? Why should not they their feelings show,

Fired by a patriotic glow, And gladly half the glorious day With roar, with yelp, with scream, with bray!

And prove how animals can cheer The advent of this famous year.

The noble horse, beyond a doubt, With zeal will draw his loads about; The bull will bellow at his best, While donkeys all will bray with zest;

Terrific roarings from the Zoo, And shrieks from many a cockatoo, Shall show the royalty's the same In savage beasts as well as tame.

Nor shall the strains of rapture cease From flocks of foxes and of geese; Insects shall hum from flowers and trees,

Homage shall come from wasps and bees,

The fish shall flap their tails about, And, if 'tis possible, get out; While, eager just to have a glimpse, Up will pop heads of loyal shrimps.

Beasts, birds and fishes we shall see United for the Jubilee;

Horn, hide and shell, hoof, fur and feather,

For once with man shall join together;

Union of hearts at length appears, Because the Queen's reigned sixty years!

Great Britain of the East.

The Japanese may in many senses be compared to the people of this country (Great Britain). To begin with they number 40,000,000; then they live in an island country of about the same area as Great Britain, and they are becoming dependent upon foreign countries for a large proportion of their food. With the lapse of each year, and especially since the war with China, this dependence on outside sources is increasing. The Japanese authorities have been much concerned to know why their people are smaller than the European races. They believe they have discovered the reason. They have concluded that it is owing to their dieting almost exclusively on rice and fish. Consequently the Japanese are now becoming meat eaters, and the movement in this direction is a natural one—almost a patriotic one. The heads of families make a point of giving their children meat once a day, if they can afford to do so, and when they are drilling or working hard Japanese men have meat twice a day. The older generation do not take to meat very rapidly. The taste for it has to be acquired; but when the Japanese does acquire the taste for European food he cannot do without it.—London People.

Briton's Iron Industry.

The output of pig iron in Great Britain in 1896 was 8,750,000 tons, which beats the record, the nearest approach to it having been 8,495,800 tons in 1883 and 8,325,000 tons in 1889. It is evident, however, that the old continuous progress of British metallurgy has been checked. British ironmasters have, in fact, now to struggle for business to a far greater extent than hitherto. The vast amount of British capital invested in foreign and colonial railway and other enterprises, and the unrivalled transport facilities afforded by the splendid British mercantile marine have all helped to maintain British supremacy not only in iron-making but also in other branches. Still, British ironmasters cannot afford to underrate the formidable character of the American and German competition which they have now to confront from day to day.—The People.

Ned Doyle at the Cosmopolitan is recommending the celebrated Putnam's Blackberry Brandy, a tonic which is unrivalled, assisted by Jim Thompson formerly of the S. S. Australia an excellent "half and half" is served to the thirsty customers of the Cosmopolitan.

The New Ambassador to France.

Gen. Horace Porter, the new Ambassador to France, is the author of the most complete and comprehensive history of Grant's military career now appearing in The Century Magazine under the title of "Campaigning with Grant." Washington is very happy in her representative at the principal courts of Europe. Gen. Porter, a worthy successor of Mr. Whitelaw Reid, is a man of wit, a scholar, a soldier, and a gentleman. It was he who said at a Fourth of July celebration, "Gentlemen, let us not forget that we were all Englishmen until we signed the Declaration of Independence." And on another occasion, when the evacuation of Yorktown was mentioned in a half apologetic way by a speaker at a banquet where a company of English gentlemen were present, I heard him in his pleasant, humorous way remark, "Anybody who knows Yorktown couldn't be surprised at the English general being quite willing to get out." With a native American's love for his country Gen. Porter has a hearty admiration for this other land of liberty which has set the example of freedom to the whole world.—Joseph Hatton in Cigarette Papers.

Buffalo Beer, half and half, with the best of ambrosial brews rule at the Pacific Saloon. The checks are transferable at the Royal and Cosmopolitan.

One ounce of prevention is better than ten ounces of cure. The Empire boasts of infallible remedies against the varioloid. Wieland beer on draft beats vaccination, and Doctor Charlie Andrew presides over the finest stock of "remedies" that can be found in town. All for medicinal purposes—and cash.

Jurors as a rule get out now-a-days very late in the evening. In the morning the wise men who have been drinking the ice water of the Supreme Court and eating dry sandwiches need something to clear their throats. That is the reason why the Pacific Saloon serves Rock and Rye every morning to the "rocky" who walk through the Rye.
