English Women's Gambling Mania.

An ultra-smart woman's club was planned for London. All of the leading women of the British social aristocracy were expected to join. Almost at once 180 of these women signed as charter members. Queen Mary was asked to become one also.

The English queen is opposed to gambling in all forms, and especially by women. Her reply to the invitation was that she would consent provided there should be no card rooms.

Of course the invitation to the queen could not be withdrawn; neither could her wishes be disregarded. The club was not formed. When it became known that there would be no gambling 140 of the 180 charter members withdrew their name.

This little story is in itself about all the commentary it requires. It shows conclusively the hold that gambling has upon British "high society," so called. Nothing else could do this so illuminatingly.

When it becomes necessary to have gambling in order that a club of the leading society women in England may even be formed, the fact is a most caustic illustration of the moral decadence of the British social aristocracy.

Too Bad for Man in "Dry" Town

The sly fellow who has been shipping in "wet" goods under some aristocratic merchandise title, such as "soap," "sugar," etc., is now strictly up against it.

Uncle Sam has just handed down a decision that is said to be directly aimed at just such business.

Hereafter all employees of railroads as well as the railroads themselves who accept and bill freight consignments of merchandise under any other billing but the actual contents of the consignment will be held liable by the courts of the United States as well as the party who makes the false statement to the railroad employee.

So everybody will have to use the right label hereafter or have a day of reckoning with Uncle Sam.—Grand Junction Sentinel.

A gorgeous street parade, one mile in length, headed by two trumpeting military bands, will leave the show grounds of the A. G. Barnes circus, in Delta September 25, at 10:30 a. m. on the day of exhibition. Performances will be given at 2 and 8 p. m. The doors are opened one hour previous to the performances.

THE THINKERS.

H. C. Adams.—One of the advantages of co-operation in any business that men can get together and put what they know into a pool, and then each man can pull out what he knows and what the other man knows.

Leon F. Lubash.—The security demanded on loans depends on what the borrower has and on the borrower himself, but it usually is horses or cattle, or both. The rate on loans is usually 10 per cent out in this country. The business men get about 6 per cent. Farm buyers would be able to get out of debt provided crops were fair at a rate of 2 or 2½ per cent, but cheaper money would be bound to advance the price of land.

S. Kirkpatrick.—I feel like a fish out of water as a member of congress. It's too all-fired slow and I am used to action. Although I have reached the three-score years and ten allotted as man's span of life, I like to go like a shot when I get started. As a revenue officer in the south I was shooting at moonshiners every now and then. Congress is too tame for a man of my temperament. I am carrying around with me a dozen pieces of lead, but I lack much of being a dead one.

T. G. Whitney.—The greatest asset we can possess is character. The honest man or woman in any vocation in life is the one who is sought after. In the daily activities of business life the honest man is in demand. He may have many excellent qualities, but the one thing to be cherished above all else is unquestionable integrity. In business confidence is the cornerstone, and this is why the German credit banks are so successful. Let a man be thought worth watching, or let him come under the ban of suspicion, and his commercial reputation is seriously impaired.

C. H. Rowell.—The chief motive power in the practical affairs of business is a mere matter of mind. It is not money that moves the wheels of industry, but faith, courage and cheerfulness. If some universal atmospheric hashish were to infuse optimism into the leaders of the financial and business world, that mere state of nerves would begin to lay track, operate factories and produce and sell goods, and the money to make good these transactions would be produced by the transactions themselves. It is a dream which opens the mountain-side and brings out the gold. It is ambition which plows the prairie and reclaims the desert. It is an instinct which builds great cities and establishes through them the distributive system of a continent. Then instinct, ambition and dream exchange with each other and the solid face of the earth is transformed.

His Farewell Speech.

James H. Wallis, "the flyman of Boise," has made Idaho the most sanitary and most flyproof state in the union.

Mr. Wallis, discussing his success with a New York reporter, laughed and said:

"I have succeeded in eradicating the fly by making all Idaho hate the fly even as old Dan Carson hated his wife. Poor old Dan lay dying. His wife, melted a little for once, said to him: 'Your goin', Dan.'"

"Dan, his eyes closed, made no reply. His wife then repeated with a sigh: 'Dan, you're goin'; but I'll soon follow you.'"

"Upon this Dan's glassy orbs opened and he said in a hollow voice: 'You stay here as long as you can.'—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A few of the many other favorite acts to be seen with the A. G. Barnes circus will be that of Major Robert Thornton and his troupe of bears, Captain Stonewall and his sea lions, Prof. Emery and his herd of Siamese elephants Miss Ethel Blondin and her four educated Arabian stallions, which perform in unison with a lion, bear, dog and monkey; Captain Englehart and Prince Congo, an orang-outang which does everything but talk. Remember the date—September 25.

Mrs. Champa—Be sure and advertise for Fido in the morning newspapers. (Next day she read the following: Two Dollars Reward—Lost, a mangy lapdog, with one eye and no tail. Too fat to walk. Answers to the name of Fido. Smells like monkey house. If returned stuffed $5 reward.)

A Cheerful Spirit.

Senator Bristow was talking about a Washington lobby whose lobbying had failed.

"They took their shipwreck very philosophically, very cheerfully," he said. "They reminded me of the Ohio farmer in the spring floods.

"This farmer, having been flooded out, was rushing down stream with his family in a dilapidated skiff. A relief boat steamed up to him and the skipper called:

"Hullo, there! What do you want?"

"The farmer, bailing with one hand and paddling with the other, answered, cheerfully:

"'Nothin' but wings, boss—nothin' but wings.'—Detroit Free Press.
