TELLS EPISCOPALIANS WHAT NATION-WIDE CAMPAIGN IS

The origin, object and programme of the nation-wide campaign of the Episcopal church were clarified by Rev. John G. Sadtler of Bridgeport on Thursday evening at a mass meeting held at Trinity Episcopal church. The visiting clergyman explained in an interesting way just how the campaign came into being, what its objective is and how the programme is to be carried out. The meeting was presided over by Rev. J. Eldred Brown, rector of Trinity Episcopal church.

In his opening words Rev. Mr. Sadtler said the object of the nation-wide campaign is an effort to apply and bring to bear the whole power of the church on the whole task of the church. He told of the origin of the movement and of the forming of the central committee and later of parish committees, the duties of the latter being to bring the movement before the people. The real objective of the campaign is the church's whole task, he said. That was brought out by the surveys to show the various needs. Speaking of needs, he said, the board of missions tells us of the Indians we have neglected. They also tell us of the mountaineers, cut off from education and culture. The only schools they can have are those provided by people from outside. Think of the negro population, four-fifths of them below the Mason and Dixon line, ignorant and emotional. What they need is instruction.

Then the foreigners among us. The board of missions is asking us to do something better for them. Twenty millions of foreign speaking people in our country and one-half of them unable to read or write. Are we to give them over to false leaders? A million dollars may be needed for Americanization work.

Then of course the joint commission on social service has a program. There must be some sort of partnership if there is to be expression in business life of brotherhood. Many a man is coming frankly to say the only hope of peace and cooperation between capital and labor is when every man will stand by the Golden Rule. Men are turning more than ever to Christian principles as the solutions. There is not only the need but there is the demand and the question is, How are we going to supply it?

There is to be a canvass next Sunday in most churches when men and women will be asked what they are willing to do. The service proposition will be put before them first. Are you willing to give of your time to the need of the church. You are asked to sign up to do something. Then you are asked to make some contribution such as you feel able to make. There is also a programme for the children. Everybody can have a part. We can't get out more of this than we put in it said the clergyman in his closing words.

After the hymn, Fling Out the Banner, Archdeacon Brown introduced Charles A. Pease of Hartford a leading layman of the diocese. Mr. Pease gave a general talk on the campaign and told of the way Hartford has arranged its programme. These millions can't be raised unless there is an intensive campaign, he said. Get the people interested in the church.

The meeting adjourned about 9.30 o'clock.

All over the country, Sunday, 100,000 trained canvassers will go out to enlist every man, woman and child on the roster of the Episcopal church behind this program.

They will undertake a national plan for Americanizing the foreign-born in co-operation with the federal department of the interior. They will seek to discover and to establish through the country a substitute for the saloon. They will build new churches and new community centers, establish facilities of education in lands remote from civilized institutions. They will send medical aid to distant countries where it is rarely within reach. They will help to increase the capacity of hospitals, and of industrial schools and other institutions. They will make possible social service work upon a broader scale in crowded cities and isolated rural districts. And they will increase the salaries of underpaid clergymen to a living wage, that these may more efficiently direct the work of which they are in charge.

These are major provisions of the church's programme. To carry them out the church must recruit 1,500 new workers for the home and the foreign fields. It must build approximately 2,000 new buildings—churches, community houses, schools, hospitals and other institutions and centers. And it must provide new equipment for hundreds of others.

The programme of the nation-wide campaign is based upon a recently completed survey of the church's needs and opportunities in the next three years, both in the United States and its territories, and in Latin America, China and Japan. The survey was reduced to a practical budget, and this budget calls for $42,000,000 of which $14,000,000 is for the work being done by the Episcopal dioceses in the United States; $10,000,000 for the general missionary work of the church at home, and $18,000,000 for the work in the foreign field, for religious education and social service, and for expansion of the activities of the church's subsidiary organizations.

Not only the leading clergymen of the church, but its foremost laymen put themselves behind this program from its inception. Such men have given their services to the direction of the campaign, as Lewis B. Franklin, who directed the government war loan organization through the five Liberty loans, and Henry P. Davison directing head of the American Red Cross.

SECURES DIVORCE FROM HER ARTIST HUSBAND

In the superior court here Wednesday afternoon, after the trial of the Bill vs. City of Norwich case had been adjourned for the day, Judge Donald T. Warner heard the uncontested divorce case of Lois K. Johnston of Noank against Charles H. Johnston of Mystic on the grounds of desertion. The couple was married on Feb. 2, 1916, and the wife alleged she was deserted on Aug. 5 of the same year.

The wife, whose maiden name was Asheraft, was first called to the stand by Attorney B. H. Hewitt. She testified that after marriage she first lived with her husband at his parents' home in Mystic, but in July she was brought to the Backus hospital in this city. After her baby was born, her husband visited her once at the hospital but didn't want to see the baby. In August the chauffeur who worked for the Johnston family came to the hospital and took her and the baby to her own parents' home, which he said was his instructions. That was the last she had seen or heard from her husband, but money has been sent her from the Johnston family for her support. For the last month Mrs. Johnston said she had been in New York and had been working there.

Judge Warner put some questions to the witness from which he learned that she had made no effort to communicate with her husband since then. She said there had been no quarrel with her husband at any time.

Attorney G. Curtis Morgan made a statement to the court that the husband was an artist and had always been pampered by his parents and had never done anything but dabble in art. He was peculiar in his actions at times and sometimes would shut himself in his room and speak to no one for a day or two at a time.

Louis Doyle, who was the Johnston chauffeur, who took Mrs. Johnston to and from the hospital, testified that young Johnston was an easy-going sort of a fellow who had never earned a cent in his life. The witness told of the visit to the hospital and the orders he had to take Mrs. Johnston to her own parents' home. Robert M. Howard of Noank, a brother-in-law of the petitioner, testified Johnston had never lived with her since she came back from the hospital. She had worked to support herself and her child.

Judge Warner granted the divorce and gave the mother the custody of her three-year-old son.

LOUIS R. SOUTHWORTH SHOWN DEFERENCE AND LOVE

Mrs. Amos A. Browning and Miss Sarah P. Browning of Norwich and Andrew Avery of Ledyard were in South Woodstock Wednesday to attend the funeral of Louis Rhodes Southworth. Among others present at the funeral was Mr. Southworth's brother-in-law, Dr. Amos Avery, formerly of Norwich, now a prominent physician in Sapulpa, Oklahoma, who had left that town at 5 p. m. Sunday on receiving notification of Mr. Southworth's death.

From the Norwich Bulletin where he had been a most efficient night editor for over three years and where he was affectionately called "The Deacon," Mr. Southworth had gone to a Providence newspaper and then to the New York World and for twenty-four years had covered the shipping news for that paper, earning from his associate reporters the nickname of "The Skipper." That his services in New York were appreciated up to the time in 1915 that ill health compelled him to give up newspaper work, was evidenced by the fact that the owner of the New York World, Ralph Pulitzer, sent his personal representative to South Woodstock to make arrangements for and remain until after the funeral, and this man, a World employe for 29 years, sent his paper the following dispatch Wednesday night:

South Woodstock, Conn., Dec. 3.—Louis R. Southworth, familiarly known as "Skipper," who died Saturday night after a protracted illness, was buried here today. His funeral was largely attended by relatives, newspaper men and former classmates at Brown University.

Among the floral tributes were a large wreath from the "Skipper's" associates on The World, for which he covered ship news twenty-four years; a wreath of orchids from Ralph Pulitzer, and others from the New York Ship News reporters, Capt. H. F. Dotson of the Cunard Line and from the class of '79 Brown University.

The services at Mr. Southworth's home, Arnold's Inn, were conducted by the Rev. F. E. Harrison of the Woodstock Congregational church and the Rev. Henry D. Baker of South Woodstock, both of whom paid high tributes to the "Skipper."

Masonic burial service was held in accordance with wishes Mr. Southworth often had expressed.

It is an interesting fact that Mr. Southworth's home, Arnold's Inn, had been the family homestead for 150 years. His great grandfather, Moses Arnold, immigrated to Woodstock and bought 1,000 acres of land, apportioning it to his children, as they married. Mr. Southworth's farm holdings comprised 60 acres and the quaint homestead contains many priceless antique furnishings, rare china, etc. He was very proud of his old home and his summer vacations and his later years of leisure there were periods of quiet content and genuine happiness, suggestive, somehow, of his own reserved, though sunny and friendly nature.

Both bulletins are mailed gratuitously to applicants.

There will also be erected another large machine shop at Erie, Pa., will be one of the largest of the company's shops at Erie and elsewhere. The company has also under consideration substantial additions to its other manufacturing plants. These increased facilities are required to take care of the rapid expansion of the General Electric Company's business."

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 4.—Addressing the students at the International Y. M. C. A. college today, Darius A. Poland, he said, needs the workers most of all and he pointed out the broad support promised them. As a result of his appeal twenty students are expected to enter this service at once.

Have You a Real Boy In Your Home?

Somebody once said that girls would be girls and boys would be boisterous.

Boys are bound to do a certain amount of scuffling and to put it in their words—"rough housing;" they wouldn't be real boys if they didn't.

Mothers and fathers know that's pretty hard on clothes; we can be of some help in that respect; we have clothes that will stand a lot of rough treatment.

GAS IN THE STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia to Overcome Trouble Caused by Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments, and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat it with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead, get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and blood right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation, and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.
