ENTERTAINMENTS

Hyperion Theater.

MAY IRWIN AT THE HYPERION.

Miss May Irwin is one of the most popular actresses on the American stage. Each recurring season she returns to the cities she plays yearly and receives an enthusiastic welcome—the welcome of an actress who never disappoints her audiences. It is true that May Irwin can lay claim to an extraordinary magnanimity. She has a thorough knowledge of stage effect and she has a keen intuition of the wants of an audience; but beyond all else she is a worker of indefatigable energy. She leaves nothing to chance, and from the time she made her first appearance on the stage she has believed in but one thing—hard and conscientious work. Plenty of this has been put in on her production "Madge Smith, Attorney," which will be given at the Hyperion with a good company next Thursday and which is said to be about the greatest success of her career. It is replete with humorous dialogues, comical situations, catchy songs, pretty melodies, a bevy of beautiful girls and an atmosphere of wholesome hilarity. Seats now on sale. Prices $1.50, $1.75 cents and 50 cents.

In the cast of "Miss Simplicity" with Frank Daniels was several of the best known light-opera favorites on the stage. It has always been the generous policy of the Daniels management to surround its star with clever supporting people, and the dramatic performance of the new comedy opera is significant of a continuance of the business principle by Manager Kirk LaShelle. Theater-goers will recognize with the keenest of pleasure the names of Alice Carter, Helen Lord, Grace Myers, Helen Merrill, Grace Belmont, Henry Woodruff, Owen Westford, Frederick Bailey, Frank Dearnuff and Lawrence Wheat as they glance down the programme. Daniels comes to the Hyperion next Friday night. Seats on sale to-morrow. Prices $1.50, $1.75 cents and 50 cents.

Clyde Fitch's "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines" with Ethel Barrymore in the role of Mme. Trenton, the young American prima donna, will be at the Hyperion next Saturday night, with special matinee. "Captain Jinks" will be played by exactly the same company which had it in hand the end of last season at the Garrick theater, New York. Every endeavor is to be made to continue Miss Barrymore's starring engagement just as it began. This is the first play in which she was the center attraction, and both she and her manager, Charles Frohman, are greatly gratified that one so young could carry a piece in New York for two hundred consecutive performances. "Captain Jinks" record of last spring and winter. Seats on sale Thursday. Prices $1.50, $1.75 cents and 50 cents.

GENERAL OPERA HOUSE.

"THE CHERRY PICKERS."

Joseph Arthur's picturesque drama, "The Cherry Pickers," was presented at the Grand Opera House last evening by the King Dramatic company to a good-sized audience, despite the unfavorable weather. This play scored a big hit upon its production in New York city a few years ago. It was afterwards taken out on the road and was successful everywhere. It is now the piece of resistance of the King Dramatic company's repertoire. Its production last evening was in every way worthy and thoroughly enjoyed by the audience. Between the acts some clever specialties are presented by the DeVulps and the Little Sisters Levey. This afternoon and evening Franklin Fyle's new drama, "Cumberland '61," will be the bill.

"CUMBERLAND '61."

"Cumberland '61" received the highest endorsement from both press and public on the occasion of its original presentation at the Fourteenth Street theater, New York city, four years ago, where it did a phenomenal business for three months and only moved out then to fulfill previous contracts. It is one of the most absorbing of all the war dramas given to the stage during the past ten years, and will be presented by the King Dramatic company at the Grand Opera House this afternoon and evening.

"THE SPORTING DUCHESS."

"The Sporting Duchess," the great spectacular drama, which has gained much fame by reason of its phenomenal runs of one year in London, three hundred nights in New York, one hundred nights in Boston and one hundred nights in Philadelphia, will be presented by the King Dramatic company at the Grand Opera House to-morrow afternoon and evening. The complete original production will be presented. The scenes in this great spectacle are as follows: Brackenbury Hall, Yorkshire; the Downs, Melton; the "White Hart Tavern"; Tattersall's famous Horse Exchange, London; the Regimental Ball; the Great Hotel, London; the Law Courts, London; Villa on the Thames; a Sanitarium at Paisree; a corner of the Paddock at Epsom Downs; the interior of the Paddock and the gray Derby race. It can be seen at a glance that this is one of the greatest spectacular plays that has ever been produced. In the Derby race a number of thoroughbred horses, ridden by professional jockeys, will participate in one of the most thrilling horse races ever given on a stage. Among the well known artists in the company are Helen Courtney, Alice Meredith, Frank Munsell and Garvel Harris.

BIG ADVANCE SALE FOR BICENTENNIAL WEEK AT THE GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

Fully two hundred requests for reserved seats for next week's attractions at the Grand Opera House were received yesterday by that management. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee and night, "Kidnaped in New York" will be the attraction. On Thursday, Friday and Saturday, matinee and night, this season's great dramatic success, "Australia," by the author of "The Parish Priest," will be the bill. Prices will be as usual—10, 20 and 25 cents at matinees and 10, 20, 30 and 50 cents at evening performances.

Polly Wender and Theatre.

Rain or shine, Polly's house gets the people. Yesterday afternoon and evening there were big houses, and those unlucky ones who braved the rain were well repaid, for the show, to use the parlance of the small boy, "is great."

Merriment rules the purpose of each act, and the success of the effort was attested by the rars of laughter that greeted Reno, Richards and company, the eccentric comedians, as they cut up all sorts of antics in a lively act. The fat comedian in this act is a whole show in himself. Burke's dogs astonished the house. They performed many difficult and amusing tricks, and capped the climax when a row of them played two tunes on a chime of sleighbells, striking the bells with their paws and playing the melodies without an error in time or tune.

Louise Montrose, a dainty young woman with a merry specialty, "made good" and won instantaneous favor. Smith and Campbell, the jolly jokers; Hal Davis and company, Mitchell and Marron and the Seeker Trio were all excellent.

The return of the McKinley funeral pictures was very acceptable and obtained unstinted praise. Since they were here two weeks ago, a beautiful allegorical subject, "The Nation Mourning Her Martyred President," has been added.

For bi-centennial guests the show at this house will be run as a continuous performance on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, beginning at 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

Prices: Matinee, 10 and 20 cents; evening, 10, 20 and 30 cents; ladies at matinee, 10 cents.

WHO OUGHT TO VOTE.

A prominent lecturer is reported as saying about the education of boys and girls "We all aspire to the prizes, but the girls not only aspire they perspire, and generally get there." The recent report of Dean Crow of Northwestern University, shows that 40 per cent of male students were marked "poor," only 20 per cent of female students were so marked during the first semester. During the second half of the year, the markings were 12 per cent of the men as against 5 per cent of the women. This would seem to indicate not only a higher grade of scholarship, but better "staying qualities" in the feminine make-up.

The question of times presents itself to the inquiring mind, as to how long this country will rest content to pay the major part of its enormous school tax for the education of its girls, and yet excuse them from the common duties of citizenship. Our high schools graduate from five to seven girls for every boy; now, if an educational qualification has any arguments in its favor, the extra girls ought not to be represented, or misrepresented, by inferior men.—Katherine V. King.

A WORD ABOUT REV. MR. TWICHELL.

Amos Parker, of Madison, Wis., a Yale man of 1884, formerly a prominent New Haven man, contributes to the current "Congregationalist" a readable illustrated article upon Yale university, and in the course of it he has this to say of Rev. Mr. Twichell, of Hartford:

It is befitting, too, that the sermon in Battell should be preached by Rev. Joseph H. Twichell, of Hartford. He rowed on the crew as a student and he fought in the war as a chaplain. This would be enough to secure him the admiration of those successive classes, but they love him, too, at Yale for his genial, ever-youthful, manly spirit. Joe Twichell, they all call him, and a mighty power for righteousness are his frequent talks near the elms.

A university has two main functions—the training of citizens and the discovery of truth. The assembly of alumni on October 20 will show what Yale has accomplished in one of these directions; the Bi-centennial publication shows the measure of her power to fulfill her second duty. It is peculiarly appropriate that this series of scholarly works should be dedicated to the graduates of the university. It remains for the graduates to show their appreciation of the honor and their loyalty to Yale by finding room for the series on their library shelves, or by presenting it to the public libraries in the various towns where they live. The series is published by Charles Scribner's Sons of New York.

Caught—"Oh, my!" she exclaimed, impatiently, "we'll be sure to miss the first act. We've been waiting a good many minutes for that mother of mine."

"Hours, I should say," he replied, rather tartly.

"Ours?" she cried joyfully. "Oh, George, this is so sudden!"—Philadelphia Press.

YALE'S PUBLICATIONS.

FAST NUMBERS OF VOLUMES WILL BE SEEN BY VISITORS.

Will Cover the Whole Field of University Study and Will be Bound in Yale Blue—Series Will be Scholarly Rather Than Popular.

The most enduring and most significant monument of Yale's two hundredth anniversary is a row of substantial books, growing steadily larger day by day, which may be found on the receiving shelves of every great library in the country. As these quiet volumes do not appeal to the eye like a torchlight procession, nor yet to the ear like the many brass bands specially hired for the celebration, they are attracting comparatively little interest. Still, a university is popularly spoken of as a seat of learning; and if its two centuries of growth have not been in vain, learning should be pretty firmly established on the Yale campus. It is to emphasize this vital phase of the matter that the committee in charge have, with the approval of the president and fellows, arranged for a series of scholarly publications "as a partial indication of the character of the studies in which the university teachers are engaged."

The casual observer the most extraordinary thing about these volumes is that they are not bound in Yale blue—a bit of good taste on which the committee is to be sincerely congratulated. They are of uniform octavo size, printed in large type on heavy paper, and bound in serviceable blue-green cloth, with the Yale seal on cover and back. Already twelve volumes have appeared, and most of the remaining thirteen will be ready before October 20.

The series is scholarly rather than popular; not many of the volumes will find their way into the circulating library; but for the scholar and the scholar's library they are indispensable. In subject-matter they cover nearly the whole field of university study—the philosophical sciences, including language and literature; mathematics and the natural sciences; history, economics and psychology. The president of the university, standing as he does at the head of all the faculties, and representing the sum and aim of all these studies, opens the list with a book, not on his own specialty of economics, but on "The Education of the American Citizen." This is, perhaps, the volume of the whole series, which will appeal most widely to the alumni and to all who believe that higher education is the surest support and safeguard of American citizenship.

The remaining volumes are all technical. Among those dealing with the ancient languages and literature, the most notable are: "The Great Epic of India," an exhaustive study of the Sanskrit vedas by Professor E. Washburn Hopkins; "The History of Whiney's success," in the chair of Sanskrit and comparative philology; "Historical and Critical Contributions to Biblical Science," by members of the Semitic faculty; "Life in Greece in the Homeric Age," by Professor Thomas D. Seymour; "Chapters on Greek Metric," by Professor Goodell, the scholarly author of the Greek commemorative ode which will be sung at the celebration; and "Principles and Methods in Syntax," by Professor E. F. Morris, of the department of Latin, and general editor of the series.

Coming to the domain of Romance scholarship we have "The Gallego-Sastillan Court Lyrics of the 14th and 15th Centuries," by Professor H. R. Lang; and in the department of English "Biographical Sketches of English Prose Writers," by Professor Albert S. Cook, and the first installment of a work by Professor Lounsbury called "Shakespearean Wars." All students of English know how ably Professor Lounsbury has treated Shakespeare's great predecessor, Chaucer. The general field of philology is further represented by "Lectures on the Scientific Study of Language," by Professor Hans Gertel; and "The Elements of Experimental Phonetics," by Professor E. W. Scripture, of the psychological laboratory.

Eleven of the thirty volumes comprising the series deal with mathematics and the natural sciences, and several of these are the work, not of an individual professor, but of the entire staff of one of the scientific laboratories. The two volumes of "Research Papers from the Kent Chemical Laboratory" include also the work of graduate students. The laboratories of the Sheffield Scientific school are represented by volume under the editorship of Professors Chittenden, Wells, Penfield and Pirsson. In the group of scientific writings we notice also "A Short Treatise on Vector Analysis," edited by Mr. G. B. Wilson from lectures by the venerable mathematician, Professor J. Willard Gibbs, F. R. S., and "Light," by Professor Charles S. Hastings.

Yale has always been especially strong in the departments of economics and history. Professor Sumner has contributed a text book on "Sociology"; the bi-centennial committee, secretary of the "Financial and Industrial Conditions of the Confederate States of America," and various members of the faculty of law have prepared a joint work entitled "Two Centuries' Growth of American Law."

A university has two main functions—the training of citizens and the discovery of truth. TRIBUTE TO PRESIDENT M'KINLEY.

General H. B. Carrington Before the Franklin County (Ohio) Bar.

The Hyde Park (Mass.) Gazette of Saturday last contains the following article, which will be of much interest to many in this vicinity by reason of the fact that General Carrington is widely known here:

At a memorial meeting of the Franklin County (Columbus) Ohio, Bar, on Saturday, September 21, in tribute to President McKinley, General H. B. Carrington, with one exception the only surviving member of that bar in 1848, but now on the army retired list, and a resident of Hyde Park, closed brief remarks as follows:

"Forty years ago, when I parted with you for other duty, the very existence of this Union was in peril. Today we meet in the shadow of another solemn ordeal. And yet, through a widening rift in the great sorrow cloud that has dropped tears all over the sentient earth, there seems to gleam a supernatural radiance from the Great White Throne. Between earth and sky, the incense wave of heartfelt prayer has filled all space; and even although the Almighty Father did not spare to us the bodily presence of the beloved McKinley, He did bring his children to His own presence; and a people at the footstool of divine grace and mercy shall never be sent empty away."

"Brethren of the Franklin County bar! Two thoughts seek expression before we part. The first is this: The dignity of your profession has been enhanced by the events we are gathered to consider. If the church be the sanctuary of moral force, this temple of justice no less represents that civil force which is ordained to protect society from violations of moral obligation. 'Anarchos' is best and most comprehensively translated, 'Without God in the world.' Screen your eyes a moment and imagine that possibility, ye men of the law. And then magnify your profession as the conservators of law."

"My other thought is this: The mightiest nations of the world realize at last that one common foe is undermining and endangering all social order and all domestic peace; that ambition for physical preponderance must yield to the demands for a common self-defense, against a deadly foe; that they must speedily converge their might against this lawless and godless enemy, in the interest of fraternity, reciprocity and charity, or they will challenge a world-wide conflagration of all that is righteous and blessed on earth."

"It is thus and just now that we must take inspiration for the future. The rumbling wheels, the heavy tramp, tramp, tramp of our citizen militia, the solemn dirge, the floods of tears, the heart-ache and the sighs of last week are still above and around us, never to be forgotten. The nation has felt a sudden jar, as if the Supreme Director of all things had for a moment set a break upon our progress, perhaps to check the impetuous rush for gold and greed; but the nation will move on to a perpetual and world-wide destiny if, in companionship with God, and never without God, it shall make righteousness the spur of its progress, and the ideal goal of its race."

The Ohio citizens and papers gave cordial welcome to their former citizen and adjutant-general, who put the first twenty-six regiments into the field, and who, besides commissioning Garfield, Hayes, McClellan, Rosecrans and others, mustered the late president into service. They recall the fact that besides thirteen regiments of volunteers and eight regiments of militia thus promptly placed in the field, on May 6, 1861, he issued a general order, No. 16, referred to in Appleton's Annual Cyclopedic, distributing among the counties an assignment of one thousand additional companies, as a reserve, which large force was afterwards summoned to verify his prediction of the duty of Ohio, to have one hundred thousand more men ready upon demand. His prediction, telegraphed to Secretary Cameron, that "the result, however long, would be certain that Ohio had come enough ahead for a year, and would go to the Gulf if necessary," was no "crazy utterance," as some declared, but an estimate of duty and ability now appreciated and honored by the Buckeye state.

Very sincerely yours, Otho Ernest Michaelis, Corporal, Co. H and Company Clerk.
