Russia Disposes of Murder Cases in Jewish Riots

Russia has disposed of some of the murder cases that have been under investigation for a long time. The government has appointed a special commission to look into the matter, and has made several arrests. The commission has so far succeeded in recovering some of the bodies, and has also discovered evidence that will be useful in the trial of those charged with the murders. The government has also taken steps to prevent further outbreaks of violence, and has issued orders to the police to keep order.
