YALE'S NEW BUILDINGS.

ELEGANT NEW DORMITORIES WHICH HAVE BEEN ERECTED.

Vanderbilt Hall Practically Complete—Work Not So Far Advanced on White and Berkeley Halls—The New Dormitory for the Tea Company to be Known as St. Anthony's Hall.

The Yale campus is again awakening from its yearly summer quiet and assuming an air of bustle and activity. Repairs on the different buildings are being hurried forward as fast as possible to be ready for the opening of the entries a fortnight from today. Vanderbilt hall is practically completed and stands ready to receive its coming occupants. The high iron fences in front and between Osborn hall and Vanderbilt hall, and the Art school and Vanderbilt hall, have been put up, but the gates have not yet been put in. The decorators are now at work on the apartments which are to be occupied by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., of the Senior class. They will not finish their work for a week or two yet, and when completed it will be the most elegant suite of rooms on the campus. The interior of this dormitory throughout is complete in every respect, and finished with a degree of taste and elegance which makes it one of the finest college buildings in the country. The walls of the different entries are all of white glazed bricks. Every study is provided with a window seat and an elegant mantel and fire-place. Grass has now grown up on the plot in front of the hall, and the carbonized stone walks have been laid so that everything about the premises has a more finished appearance than it has had at any time previously.

The site of old North Middle college has been graded and will be turfed over this fall. The work on Berkeley and White halls does not seem to be as near complete, although the workmen are devoting all their time to finishing the interior. A high iron fence is also being erected in front of these halls. A carbonized stone walk has been laid in the rear of the buildings along High street and in front on Elm street. The little round brick building on Elm street, which is now used by the workmen for a tool house has aroused considerable curiosity. It is to be used as a porter's lodge, and is the first time that the experiment has been tried at an American college.

Another building which promises to be a very fine one is that being erected on College street near Wall, and which will be the future home of the Sheffield Scientific school chapter of the Delta Psi, better known as "the Tea Company," or "43," the latter numerals referring to the old home of the fraternity on College street. The new home will be known as "St. Anthony's Hall." Delta Psi was founded at Yale in 1868, and is to-day the leading fraternity of the Sheffield Scientific school. "Book and Snake," or "the Cloister" is a close rival of the Tea Company, and for many years has been the only "Shef." society that owned its own club house or dormitory. The Tea Company men have always rented a house and lived together, but this arrangement was far from satisfactory, as an ordinary dwelling house could accommodate but a small portion of the men who belong to the society. At one time the Tea Company men had a house at 61 Grove street and later another on Temple street. Then there was an interval of years during which they had no permanent home, and finally eight or nine years ago 133 College street was rented and has since been known as the home of the Tea Company.

A number of years ago the society erected a large and handsome chapter house at the corner of College and Wall streets. The new dormitory will adjoin this, but will have no connection with it as far as entrances are concerned. The architecture of the new building will be in keeping with that of the chapter house, and the material will be the same, namely East Haven sandstone, with tile trimmings and tile roof.

The dimensions will be 75x90 feet and the shape of the building will be an "L," the shorter wing adjoining the chapter house.

The parlors for the building have been made with great care and the arrangements will be as near perfect as possible. The Sheffield faculty and the corporation have both expressed themselves as greatly pleased both with the idea and the plan of the dormitory, and the members are looking forward to its completion as marking a new era in the fraternity's existence at Yale. One of the chief features of the building will be a handsome library, which will be stocked with handsome reference books for the scientific students, and which will be a convenient and valuable place for study. This idea of having a library in the dormitory is a new one, none of the other Shef. dormitories having anything in addition to their sleeping and study rooms but a general lounging room.

The entrance to the dormitory will lead into a vestibule, from which double doors will open into a grand hallway and lounging room. This room will be irregularly shaped and in one corner will be the main staircase. On the opposite side will be the entrance to the library, which will be in the wing of the building, which will face on College street and adjoin the chapter house. The general dimensions of the hallway will be 27 x 30 feet and those of the library 20 x 30 feet. There will be a large open fire-place in the hallway or lounging room, and the library will be raised three or four steps above this room and be separated by large folding doors, which will be so arranged that the rooms can be thrown into one for receptions or dances. In the rear of the lounging room the other wing will extend back parallel to Wall street. In this wing and above the library will be the sitting rooms and bedrooms.

One of the most extensive architectural features of the building will be a handsome stone porch, which will extend along in front of the library on College street. Opening into this porch from the library will be handsome French windows of opaque glass, which will give to the building a cloister-like appearance. About this porch there will be considerable carving and handsome stone work.

The dormitory will accommodate twenty-six men and have additional quarters for servants. The College street elevation will be of three stories, but the rear wing will have only two. The studies and bedrooms will be arranged somewhat after the style of those in the college dormitories. All the sitting rooms will have open fire-places, and for each sitting room there will be two bedrooms. The bedrooms will not connect with the sitting rooms, but will be on the other side of the hall to afford more perfect quiet. The sitting rooms in the front wing are so arranged that they will face College street, while those in the rear will look out on Wall street. There will be several guest chambers in addition to the regular bedrooms, so as to accommodate former members of the society when in New Haven. There will be shower baths and toilets on each floor and running water in every bedroom. The basement will be used for servants' quarters and laundry. Owing to one of the antiquated blue laws of the corporation there will be no meals served in the house. This old rule was made years ago probably to prevent drinking, or more likely to give the New Haven landladies a more complete monopoly of the student purses and at the same time to bring about a due amount of fasting during the college year. It has never been repealed, and St. Anthony's hall will not be made an exception, although the new buildjng has greatly pleased the corporation.

It will not in all probability be finished in time to be occupied before November.

FAIR HAVEN.

Improvements on the Heights—General News of Interest.

Captain B. S. Merryman of Sherland avenue expectes to occupy his handsome new residence on the Heights in a month or two. It is of artistic design. The first story is of rough designed red stone, the upper stories of wood. The chimneys are of stone. One chimney is outside and adds to the ornamental appearance. The captain's house and land are the next south of Grand avenue. Captain Merryman has "sailed the seas over" and visited many distant parts of the globe on his staunch ocean vessels in days past. He has sailed on voyages across the Pacific, up the Mediterranean, and made trips to England and China and many other countries in the east have been visted by this intrepid and able navigator. Next door to the captain's EditorAllis is erecting a handsome home similar to Capt. Merryman's. It also has its foundation and first story of rough sandstone, and all the stone for both houses was taken out of the land the places are built upon. The cellars of both houses are of solid rock.

MR. T. LEASE, OF KANSAS.

Being a Sequel to Unknown Wives of Great Men.

[From Puck.]

Mr. Lease received me cordially, but when I told him I had called to obtain information about his home life and his youthful days he blushed prettily and said : "I don't think my wife would like to have these things talked about in the newspapers. She does not care what is said about herself, but she believes that the names of her husband and children should be kept out of the public press."

"But," I said, "everybody knows that you have helped your wife on in her successful career—that you have been an inspiration to her—and the public would like to know something about you. Tell me," I went on impulsively, "how your wife came to marry you."

"Well," said Mr. Lease thoughtfully, "I don't see how it can do any harm. It was this way: I was the only son of a well-off farmer in Jefferson county, and all the girls wanted me." Here Mr. Lease blushed and smiled reminiscently.

"I was in doubt," he continued, "till Mary came along and courted me. Then I knew my heart was hers and hers alone. My father objected strongly to her frequent visits to our house, but opposition never smothered true love. When my father declared he would never let us marry, Mary settled the matter in quick order by driving up to the house one night and carrying me off to the minister. And I have never regretted that elopement. She told me she would be a famous woman some day and would bring me up in the world with her, and she has kept her word."

"Of course you are fond of her public triumphs?" I suggested.

"Indeed I am," replied Mr. Lease, with a tender smile. "Here in my home with my children I watch her career, and feel proud that I am blessed to be the husband of such a woman."

"Do not her public duties separate you a great deal?" I asked.

"Yes," he replied, "but that does not lessen our affection. I make home always a pleasant place for her to come to; and when she is here I take care that she is not disturbed by the children or by household cares. That is the secret of our happy home-life. When she comes in late I do not worry her with questions or talk to her about my little home troubles. I have a nice, warm meal ready for her, and keep a smile on my face, no matter how weary I am. Oh, if all husbands would act in the same way wives would stay at home more!"

"Do you try to be a companion to your wife in her public life?" I asked.

"Well," answered Mr. Lease, modestly, "of course I cannot understand all the great questions she deals with, but I try to understand them to please her. And when she rewards me with a word of encouragement I feel that I am amply repaid."

At this point a child's cry was heard from the next room, and Mr. Lease excused himself and terminated the interview.

Wooden Nutmegs.

The members of the Uniformed rank, K. of P., who went from Connecticut to attend their great biennial encampment at Washington, have nearly all returned to their homes, but the wooden nutmegs and other tokens of Connecticut handiwork with which they went laden, they have left in other hands, spreading still further the Yankee fame and ingenuity of the Nutmeg state. The demand for these wooden nutmegs was heard on every hand and seemed never to cease. The ladies wanted them and gladly gave in exchange their gilt-lettered silken badges. And it was the wooden nutmeg and none other that they wanted. The genuine was repudiated with scorn. The Connecticut boys counted upon the generous supply they had laid in as sufficient to last them during their entire stay, but hardly had the trading of badges and cards commenced before they realized that they should have kept the mill running and turned out many more. One would not have thought a nutmeg could have been made to look so beautiful. Some had had thin and delicate silken stripes of red, yellow and blue fantastically arranged about them and could be tied in the buttonhole, some were fastened at the top and others at the mottom of the silk badges which each division wore. The general badge for Connecticut was red, yellow and blue ribbon suitably inscribed and hanging from a gilt pin, with a nutmeg at the top and another at the bottom.

There will be a big supply of nutmeg badges taken from this city to the G. A. R. encampment at Pittsburg, and they will be attached to handsome bronze badges of Stanley post.—New Britain Record.

AMONG THE CITY CHURCHES.

Features of Religious Services Yesterday in Various of the Sanctuaries.

Large congregations attended the services at St. Paul's Episcopal church yesterday. Rev. E. S. Lines preached in the morning, taking his text from Proverbs, viii., 16. The offering yesterday was for the support of the parish. Next Sunday it will be for the support of St. Andrew's mission, Newhallville.

St. Paul's Sunday school is one of the largest Episcopal Sunday schools in Connecticut and requires a large number of teachers, and Mr. Lines respectfully requests any member of the church to help in the work of teaching, as all of the teachers have not returned from their vacations.

AT DWIGHT PLACE CHURCH.

Communion was observed at Dwight Place Congregational church yesterday morning. Two new members were received by letter. Rev. Dr. Twitchell gave a short talk on the Lord's supper.

It is as easy to explain a cold as to catch one. The skin, exposed to a sudden change in temperature, ceases to throw off waste matter, and double duty is imposed upon the lungs. Hence, inflammation of the bronchial tubes and frequently consumption. A medicine to cure consumption must help not only the lungs but the stomach, because good appetite and good digestion are required to fortify the system. Slocum's Ozonized Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, with Guaiacol, is a great flesh-maker.

There Was No News to Excite Any Attention to Stocks.

New York, Sept. 8.—A few minor experimenters for the decline bought back their stock this morning, and London orders helped in Louisville and Nashville. Otherwise the market was of no interest whatever. Next week,no doubt, we shall hear much of the government crop report (which is due Monday afternoon) and of the several important corporation dividends on which action is now due. Both these factors of activity are loved by board room speculators, but they followed their common rule in waiting to begin with a reasonably clean slate on Monday.

There was no news to excite attention to any stock to-day. Perhaps the most interesting published information was the estimate of the week's total bank clearings in the country's business centers. The aggregate, despite the holiday character of the the week, was $47,657,900 greater than in the week preceding, an increase of nearly 6 per cent.
