Thomas S. Townsend, esq., of New York will by invitation deliver a lecture before the New Haven Colony Historical society Monday evening, October 29, on "Connecticut and the War for the Union," a great portion of which has been taken from his work known as "The Townsend Library."

A most enjoyable supper was given by Keeley league No. 1 at their rooms on Chapel street last evening. The hall was handsomely decorated by D. P. Candee and presented a very beautiful appearance. During the evening a most enjoyable musical was given by E. C. Cole, Miss Ella J. Small and Master Manville.

Meeting of Building Commission. A meeting of the recently appointed building commission to revise the building ordinances of the city was held in the mayor's office last evening. The members were John C. North, Builders Phelps and Townsend, Architects Robinson and Allen and Mayor Sargent. The commission will hold another meeting two weeks from last night, when an attempt will be made to formulate new building ordinances.

THE RAT RAN UP THE TRUNK.

It was an Elephant's Trunk, and She Struck Every Thing Within Reach. (From the San Francisco Examiner.) One small rat caused more damage in five minutes in the big circus tent at Central Park yesterday morning than a dozen men could repair in twenty-four hours. The rat ran up the trunk of Jess, the big female elephant, and she did the rest.

Just how it happened no one seems to know, but when the first wild yell was given, and the dust had settled, a score or more of frightened employes found two animal cages upset, and their bars bent and twisted, the canvas of the menagerie tent sagging to the ground in the place where the poles had been knocked out, and a path of ruin leading to where the big doors that close the Eighth street entrance had been burst open and smashed into kindling wood.

Jess was gone. Where she had gone or what she was doing no one knew. The fact that she was loose in the streets of a big city was sufficient provocation for the wildest conjectures, for an elephant without a master can do more damage in a given time than a dozen runaway locomotives.

At the first sound of the commotion one of the animal trainers, George Knight, groped his way out of the big tent and was just in time to see Jess demolish the doors and disappear into the street. He followed, running, and was joined at the entrance by Manager William Sells, who had been eating his supper in a restaurant across the street. They gave chase to the elephant, which had taken the center of the street and was going toward Howard street at a lively gait, waving her trunk high in the air and trumpeting loudly at every stride. By a great burst of speed Mr. Sells and Knight overtook Jess as she was crossing Mission street, but she paid no more attention to their frantic orders of "Down! Down, Jess!" than if they had not been in existence.

At Howard street she turned west, maintaining the same swinging pace, and with the two men still hanging on, one on either side. Both men have had considerable experience with elephants and neither could understand why Jess kept her trunk high in the air and why all her actions indicated pain and fright, not anger. The explanation came later.

On up Howard street she rattled, the fragment of the broken chain by which she had been tethered jingling merrily over the cobbles. Occasionally a belated wayfarer would come in view, but when he beheld the big bulk forging toward him and heard the shrill trumpeting he would disappear over the nearest fence, to be seen no more.

Just about Tenth street Jess turned into a blind alley in which were standing a lot of wagons belonging to a contractor. These she overturned as fast as she came to them. At the end of the alley is a watering trough, and into this Jess plunged her trunk. Half its contents were drawn up and then squirted out against the eaves of an adjoining house. The brute evidently gained no relief from this operation, for she overturned the trough and started for the street again, pushing aside Mr. Sells and his companion, who were still trying to get control of her.

On Howard street again the chase led, but when Eleventh street was reached Jess stopped short and began to beat her trunk on the stones of the street. Knight approached, and after great difficulty he coaxed the elephant to allow him to examine her trunk. He found something resembling a slate pencil in size and shape protruding about an inch from the hollow end of the member. Thinking this might be the cause of the trouble he took a firm hold of it, gave a stiff jerk, and out came a rat.

The little animal that had caused so much trouble was not yet dead, but nearly so, and when Jess saw it she gave every evidence of satisfaction that an elephant can give. She was commanded to kneel down, and while she was contentedly masticating a dozen loaves of fresh bread that had been brought from a neighboring baker's shop she permitted the attendants who had come up with ropes to hobble her. She was afterward led back to her quarters without the least trouble, and when the children from the orphan asylums fed her peanuts in the afternoon she looked the mildest-mannered elephant that ever wrecked a tent.

"During all my experience in the show business," said Mr. Sells, "I have never seen or heard of a like occurrence. Jess has always been a good-natured animal, and has never developed any vicious traits. She follows her Burmese trainer, 'Elephant Bill,' around like a dog, and any of the animal men can handle her.

"I suppose the rat ran in her trunk while she was asleep. An elephant sleeps with its trunk lying straight out along the ground, and I suppose when the rat ran in she contracted the muscles of her trunk and held him fast. Her trainer always sleeps with her, but he was away last night, and when she failed to find him she became panic-stricken. If he had been there she would have at once indicated to him that the trouble was and he would have relieved her. As it was we were extremely fortunate in securing her before more damage was done."

INFERENCE.

(From the Chicago Daily Tribune.) "I am glad to be able to say, children," remarked the benignant old gentleman who was addressing the Wall's Mission Sunday School, "that I never swore an oath in my life. I never drank a drop of any kind of intoxicating liquor. I never took a chew of tobacco, never had a cigar in my mouth, never smoked a pipe, never went to a theater, and never saw the inside of a circus tent.

He stopped a moment to take breath and a boy in the front seat spoke up: "I guess you must 'a' come to town on the last load, didn't ye?"

THEY ARE BOUNCERS.

A Pair of Twins That Weigh 28 1/2 Pounds. Waterbury, Oct. 23.—Martin J. Carroll, the genial clerk at the Great Atlantic and Pacific toy store, was presented by his wife Monday morning with a bouncing pair of baby boys. The youngsters together tipped the beam at 28 1/2 pounds.

To-Day at 9 a. m.

To-day is the opening of the genuine fire sale of high-class clothing in the large double building 434 and 438 State street, above Court street, as the large stock of fine winter clothing that was saved from the recent Boston fire will be thrown open to the people of New Haven to-day to be sold at 25 cents on the dollar, which means a clear saving of 75 cents on every dollar's worth of fine clothing bought at this genuine fire sale. It will pay you to come hundreds of miles to attend to this genuine sale, as a chance like this occurs only once in a lifetime. We quote prices for our opening sale to-day that have never been approached. Money must be raised in the specified time of ten days; the orders are to put such prices on the goods that there will be no question about selling them.

Men's tweed cassimere suits that are sold in every clothing store for $15, will be sold at this fire sale for $3.50, or money refunded. Men's fine Scotch cheviot and mixed cassimere suits, worth $18, sold at this sale for $4.65, or money refunded. Men's fine Scotch cheviot suits, all the latest cut and worth $20, sold here for $5.75. Men's tailor made clay diagonal suits in sack and cutaway, extra long and worth $23, sold here at $6.50. Men's foreign wide wale and English whipcord suits in cutaway, worth $38, sold here for $12.50. Youths' nobby suits, worth $13, sold here for $2.85; 95 cents buys men's splendid pants in ten styles; $1.18 buys men's cassimere pants; $1.98 buys men's fine strictly all wool pants. Men's fine trousers, worth $5, sold here at $2.10. Men's custom made fancy stripe pants, extra fine, worth $7, sold here for $2.75. Thousands of children's suits here at 58 cents each. Thousands of children's knee pants at 14 cents, and many other immense bargains. Overcoats at a mere trifle.

Come as early as you can and avoid the afternoon rush. For the benefit of those that cannot come in the daytime this genuine fire sale will remain open every night this week until 9 o'clock. Be sure you are at 434 and 438 State street, under the Westmoreland hotel, a few doors above Court street. Don't get in the wrong store. Car fare paid to out-of-town buyers. Everybody invited.

MALLEY-NEELY & Co.

New Haven, Wednesday, Oct. 24, 1894. The weather to-day—Likely to be fair. TELEPHONE No. 223.

The Cloak man has taken the entire lot of Ladies' Jackets, selling every day at $10.00 each, and has marked them $7.75 for two days—Wednesday and Thursday. If they were $50.00 each, the styles would be no better.

Some are plain, some fur trimmed. Colors are Oxford grays, navy blues, tans, blacks, Covert cloths, browns, and tan mixtures.

We could not buy them now to sell for less than $12.50. That is to say, if the order for this stock had not been placed early you would have been paying $12.50 on ordinary days instead of $10.00 as now. Just for Wednesday and Thursday, $7.75. Capes, Cloaks, Jackets.

Been buying a lot of Dolls and are going to have an Advance Sale.

They are exhibited and sold from Bargain Table No. 1. The price will be 25 cents. Exactly such Dolls have of t-ener sold for a half dollar than they have for a quarter dollar. Double jointed and supple as cats. Sort of dumb orators, all of them.

Dollies' Wardrobe. Education in funny form for Children. Stamped patterns on cloth at 10 cents each. Outlined so that a child can easily stitch them. Possibilities of little Night Gowns, Reefer Jackets, Gretchens, Guimpe dresses, Little Red Riding Hoods, etc. Models and illustrations shown at the Counter in Daylight Square. Dress Goods Department.

Some one asks, "What's the matter with those Rockers?"—that sell

$5.75 Rockers for $3.25, 5.98 Rockers for 3.98, 6.75 Rockers for 4.98, 8.50 Rockers for 4.98.

Well, the very worst we can say for them is, they are Manufacturers' Samples. Get your magnifiers and find a possible spot or scratch here and there. If you find after buying, anything like trash, bring them back.

There's a grade of Flannel here which we'd like sharp flannel judges to see.
