THE MILK supply, an essential of public health, might well be made a function of the municipality. In this way control could be made of the raising and the sale of the insured product.

The question of distributing milk is now from four to five cents a quart. This is not because the distributors make an immoral profit. They do not. It is because the system is wasteful.

Seven or eight, or even ten and twenty, cases, each with its force and driver, appear upon the same street, delivering to one house and missing ten or ten by five, for the same reason.

This is a process not profitable to anybody, but to the farmer who raises the milk, and adequately to the man who sells it.

If the municipality should provide its own supply and make its own deliveries, milk could be received and pasteurized at constant temperatures, and distribution costs could be kept within a fraction of the present cost.

If the members of the municipality would assume the responsibility for milk distribution, they might also provide the farmer for the expense inflicted upon him by the present, but unnecessary, sanitary and health requirements.

THE MISFORTUNE OF RUGGED,

WHEN HE was investigating life insurance Mr. Hughes looked like a good-sized man. When he was governor of New York and in a sense a candidate for the presidency, he looked still more rugged with his sideburns.

The change is not in his bulk. It is in the environment. He is no longer associated with an insurance company, and he is no longer a candidate for office. He is as big as when he was governor of New York. He is probably getting even bigger.

But Hughes now is associated with bigger men and bigger enterprises. As a man indeed, he is in a sense president and governor in gigantic, from the circumstance of his being so important a man dealing for four years with other large men.

He has wrestled with problems which dwarf the problems with which he wrestled with the little men.

In his task he is successful.

He has fulfilled the imagination of the world.

Because of his work he seems bigger than he is, just as Mr. Roosevelt seems bigger than he is.

The problem of life insurance and the race between the big and the small is finished. The big has won.

SETTLING THE RAILROAD question will be a key point in the next session of the legislature. The railroad managers are willing to accept the eight hour day, though they might not be as friendly about the eight hour day, which the law insists is a matter of public health.

The important thing to note in the railroad question is this: The railroad managers are willing to accept the eight hour day, though they might not be as friendly about the eight hour day, which the law insists is a matter of public health.

MISCEON SHOULDN'T RUN AGAIN.

I WILL NOT unadvisedly threaten, Mr. McLean recently. He is the logical candidate of the Republican party for state offices in the general election. The question of the rule of the Republican party is still an open question, but it seems to me that the only solution of the rule of the Republican party is in the hands of Mr. McLean.

Mr. McLean is not interested in the rule of the Republican party. He is interested in the Republican party, but he is not interested in the rule of the Republican party.

The Republicans seem to get the explanation of this remarkable statement. If he can't get the Republicans he won't get a chance to express his views.

A CITY HOSPITAL.

A CITY hospital is a necessary institution. The present institutions are good, but their function is especially to receive and not to remain in the institution during the period of their illness, or until they are cured.

A city hospital would be so operated as to give special attention to the educational and recreational needs, but not necessarily, had and had. It would be especially valuable in the treatment of infectious diseases.
