

Theatrical Chatter

BY BRANDON.

May Irwin has begun another week at the Bijou theater with the Belle of Bridgeport.

John W. Ransome in his Richard Croker make-up read the returns at Koster & Bial's last election night.

The Kansas City courts have given Alice Nielsen the right to use her stage name as her real one.

James O'Neill's stupendous production of Monte Cristo is tending the capacity of the Academy of Music every night.

James Herne approaching the end of his long stay at the Theater Republic, where he celebrated his fiftieth performance of Sag Harbor the other night.

"The Two Orphans" is to be revived next week at the American theater, New York, by the stock company there.

A funny story is told about an illustrated song act that was engaged for one of the club concerts of a Jewish club in Brooklyn.

Peter F. Daley in "Hodge, Podge & Co." will make a long run at the Madison Square theater.

A native tenor is such a rarity that most managers despair of finding one, and in many of the later comic opera productions no tenor parts are written.

Albert Parr, who has created great interest by his artist singing and intelligent acting in the operas of his repertoire.

Albert Gallatin's Nell Gwyn play is to be called "The Restoration."

"She is without a peer," wrote the hard working, conscientious press agent of the "Rockabye Baby" Opera company.

Theodore Burt Sayre yesterday completed the last act of "Thomas Moore," the play which Andrew Mack is to present later in the season.

"One may observe among English women," he says, "the same thing in the matter of gracefulness that one notices among the men in the matter of politeness."

During the progress of the war in South Africa many stories of individual heroism have been told.

English Women in South Africa Have in Many Instances Proved Their Mettle.

The Dreamer's Discovery. "Somewhere," he sighed, "there is a land where gentle breezes sweetly blow, where sparkling wavelets kiss the strand, where lovers wander hand in hand—A land I dreamed of long ago."

HUMOROUS. A Husband's Regret.—Herr Grimper (whose wife has just boxed his ears)—"And I, like a donkey, once begged for that hand."—Lustige Blaetter.

Written Examination.—"That Boston school teacher wanted me to propose by letter." "What for?" "She said many a man who was a right on grammar was terribly shaky on spelling."—Indianapolis Journal.

The Deeper Disguise.—Sergeant—"Shall I detail an officer in citizen's clothes?" "Captain—" "It won't do to have his identity suspected. Better detail an officer with citizen's manners, to make assurance doubly sure."

The Mendicant.—"Beg pardon, sir; but I haven't had anything to eat for a week." The Philanthropist—"Let me congratulate you upon your success in so interesting an experiment. I must be a great saving to you, and I'm sure you're looking well."—Boston Transcript.

Red Rock Clings to Name. Story of How Town Came by It and Its Sturdy Resolve Not to Change It.

"Up in Columbia county," said a man who spent the summer up the Hudson, to a New York Sun reporter, "is Red Rock, a small hamlet, 26 miles from Albany and near East Chatham and Crosby Lake."

"THE CADET GIRL." The announcement that we are to have "The Cadet Girl" at Poli's on Wednesday evening, with the full strength of Mr. Chamberlain's company and the production complete as it was given in New York and Boston, has aroused the liveliest anticipation among local lovers of fun.

LULU GLASER. Pretty Lulu Glaser in "Sweet Anna Page" Thursday evening at Poli's.

"THE COUNTY FAIR." If one can opine from the roars of laughter which greeted the announcement once more in this city of that old-time success, "The County Fair," at Poli's theater last evening, the play was highly pleasing to the audience present, which was one of the largest and most representative of the season.
