England has all along boasted of her great fighting powers, and yet with an army of about ten to one she is unable to finish the Boer war, which Lord Roberts reported as ended several weeks ago. The old country should send a few more of her brilliant men over there at once.

Secretary Root wants to do all the lobbying himself that is done by the war department; consequently he has sent a circular letter to the army officers who are at the head of bureaus in that department, calling their attention to army regulations. Efforts to influence legislation affecting the army should never be made except through regular military channels, and directing that all communications that army officers desire sent to congress shall be forwarded through him.

Although the army reorganization bill has not yet been reported from the senate committee on military affairs, and is not likely to be until after the Christmas recess, which will be from December 21 until January 3, the republicans are already swooping down on Mr McKinley with demands of promises of appointments that will be made when that bill becomes a law, and it is said that some republican senators have indicated to him that they will not allow the bill to go through unless their demands for pay are met.

The downfall of David Callahan, of New Haven, should be a lesson to all men who have the handling of other people's money. Callahan was a good fellow generally, and was popular, as was shown by the honors he had thrust upon him. Unfortunately for him, he allowed himself to use money not his own, expecting to be able to replace it before an accounting was called for. It came sooner than he expected, and as a result his business had to make good the loss, and he, himself, is forced to seek a livelihood by other means than as a lawyer.

Not so much is heard nowadays about new parties, or reorganizing the democratic party as was floating around a few weeks after election. The editor of the New England Democrat, in discussing this question, says that various plans are now under consideration for the union of all reform forces and all opposed to the republican party. It is probable that most of those plans will fail. The one thing their promoters have in common is opposition to republican policies, but there must be something more than mere opposition to form the basis of a powerful party and it is plain that any successful opposition to the republicans must be a powerful organization. The great trouble with reformers is that they want to accomplish everything at once, that they do not learn from history as they should that such things are accomplished slowly, a little at a time, gaining a little here and a little there. They are rather disposed to insist on their own pet ideas and to refuse to unite with any others who do not absolutely agree with them. If the opposition to republicanism could be united it would sweep the country. It is sufficiently powerful to drive everything before it. The only existing organization promising any hope of success is the democratic party. It does not suit all the reformers. It is not radical enough to meet all demands. But it comprises some seven millions of voters and requires no large additions to drive the republicans from power. That is the first thing to be accomplished. No reform can make progress in this country so long as the party of Hanna is in power. The efforts of all the reform forces now ought to be devoted to building up the democratic party. It is the hope of the country's salvation.

Very sensibly the British government has come to the conclusion that no thanksgiving festivities will be held over Robert's return. It is thought better to await the close of war operations. Bridgeport Post. Cigarette smoking is said to have caused the total blindness of a Middle town, N. Y., lad. Some day, we may get to the end of the list of evil effects the habit is responsible for. At present we only know that it destroys health and morals alike.—Ansonia Sentinel.

At last the Dreyfus case and everything connected with it has been buried in France. The vote of 158 to 2 by which the chamber of deputies granted amnesty to all persons accused of wrong-doing in the case, and stopping all civil and criminal prosecutions, shows that the French people are determined not to be bothered by this miserable affair any more.—Hartford Times.

ABRAHAM HAARSCHER, SOLDIER. "At Fort Sheridan yesterday Abraham Haarscher, a soldier of the United States army in twenty years' service, shot and killed himself near the post flagstaff."—Chicago daily papers of November 16. This brief little paragraph was practically the only obituary notice given to one of the bravest and truest of our country's heroes. He was a man whose life, although it lay along the lines of the simple duties of an enlisted man, was in many ways remarkable. Abraham Haarscher thirty-two years ago was a soldier of France. He was an Alsatian by birth and under the flag of the empire he fought through the Franco-Prussian war. At the end of the disastrous conflict, when Haarscher found that his native province had become a spoil to the enemy, he became embittered. He left his country and came to America, enlisting in the United States army, as he could then do under the law, immediately upon his arrival. He served his country for twenty years, and during that time he was offered the position of non-commissioned officer, but he did not know what the inside of a guard house looked like from a prisoner's point of view. There was no soldier in camp or barracks whose rifle and equipments were like unto his. At guard mount the nearest soldier is always chosen for the duties of orderly to the commanding officer. When Haarscher was detailed for guard mount he thought of competing with him. Three or four times he was offered the position of non-commissioned officer, and time after time he refused. Why no one ever knew. During the course of his twenty-nine years as one of Uncle Sam's soldiers Haarscher saw service in four different regiments and against every form of foe that his adopted country had to face during the years covered by his French nativity. One night, at a far northwestern garrison he was walking post as a sentinel upon a high and rocky bridge thrown across a stream. The ends of the structure marked the ends of his beat. A storm arose in sudden fury. The stream rose rapidly and the bridge began to give way. Haarscher kept on walking his post. The planks were cracking under his feet and the water was beginning to creep over the planking, when an officer of the day appeared at the end of the bridge. He saw the sentinel and his post.

"Come off that bridge, No. 5," he yelled above the storm. Haarscher walked calmly off the bridge and came to an "arms post."

"Haarscher, you did a good deed, didn't you know the bridge was going? Even as he spoke the frail structure was whirled away."

"That was my post, lieutenant," said Private Haarscher, "and you forget that I'm a Frenchman." Private Haarscher was a dandy. The neatness of his equipment had been told. Once a man who had the reputation of never having lost the position of "orderly" at guard mount, came from another garrison and reported in Haarscher's command. The two privates, as luck would have it, were detailed for guard the same day. The whole garrison turned out to see which one the adjutant would pick for the coveted position. The officer spent twenty minutes examining the rifles, waist belts, cartridge boxes and breeches of the two men. There was absolutely nothing to choose between them in point of neatness of appearance. Finally, as a last resort, the adjutant undid the blouse of the new claimant for orderly honors. He found a somewhat faded but clean undershirt. The adjutant passed to Haarscher and opened three or four buttons of his coat. Haarscher had on a brand new suit of silk underwear that must have cost him a month's pay. It was the other man on that day who walked the post in the hot sun, while Haarscher stood in the shade in front of the commandant's quarters.

The morals of the Franco-American soldier were like his rifle at guard mount—neat and clean. There was no low camp or garrison indignity for him. He was a pleasure lover, however, and he joined in all the entertainments that were to lighten the evenings of the soldier's life. At no dance or "chow" under the auspices of Company A was there any particularly attending maiden singled out for the attentions of Private Haarscher. He went the rounds and danced with all. During the years he saw his comrades marry and have a home and family. He told him his day would come. He laughed at them. For twenty-eight years he went on in his but little varying path of duty, with occasional turnings aside into the ways of pleasure. "Then this supposed confidant of old bachelor soldier fell in love. He met the sister of a former comrade. She was thirty years his junior. To this girl he gave all the intensity of love that had marked through the years his devotion to duty. He was utterly changed. The soldier who had faced unharmed the bullets of Apache, Sioux and Spaniard was at last wounded by a tiny shaft from the bow of the pygmy Cupid. No woman ever had more devoted lover than that veteran. One night last week he went to her home in Lake Forest and told her. He spoke with the same spirit in which he had replied to the officer of the day when he was ordered from his post on the bridge on that awful night near the headwaters of the Mississippi. The girl's answer was no, and Haarscher knew that she meant it.

Private Haarscher left Lake Forest and went to his quarters at Fort Sheridan. In a few moments he left the barracks and walked across one corner of the parade ground. He took one last look at the flag fluttering at the masthead of the hotel and effects in the office of the late William B. Wilson, the alleged defaulting supreme treasurer of the order. He also made claim to the funds of the order on deposit in the Essex County N. Y. bank. The law firm of A. O. Keasbey & Sons is retained by the receiver to represent him in any litigation that may arise in New Jersey.

Estate of H. Walter Webb. NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The appraisal of the estate of the late H. Walter Webb, which was filed in the surrogate's office in Essex County, N. Y., shows the gross estate to be worth $373,725.79, but the deceased gave to his widow $118,000, which was not taxable, leaving the taxable estate $255,725.79. From this comes $4,000, the expense of appraisal.

HELD FOR A RANSOM. Son of Millionaire Cudahy Kidnaped in Omaha. POLICE SCOUR CITY AND COUNTRY.

A Mysterious Horseman Leaves a Note at Front Gate Saying the Boy is Safe and Will be Returned in Consideration of $25,000.

OMAHA, Dec. 20.—Edward Cudahy, Jr., 15 years old, son of Edward A. Cudahy, millionaire packer and head of the Cudahy Packing company of Omaha, is missing from his home in this city, and his parents believe he has been kidnaped. The entire police and detective force of the city and half a hundred men employed by Mr. Cudahy have been scouring the city and country throughout the day in hopes of locating the young man, or securing a clue which would lead to a knowledge of his whereabouts, but without success. Business at Mr. Cudahy's packing plant in South Omaha has practically stopped yesterday, nearly the entire force there joining in the search. The boy's parents are distracted at his disappearance, and the father has offered to pay a reward of $25,000. No questions asked if his son shall be returned to his home. An anonymous letter has been received at the Cudahy home substantiating the fears of the family that the boy has been kidnaped. Young Cudahy left home at 8 o'clock Tuesday night to take some books to the residence of Captain Rustin, about two blocks distant, and that was the last seen of him. As midnight arrived and he did not return, the police were notified, and two detectives were detailed to work on the case. It was not until nearly 9 o'clock yesterday morning, however, that the matter began to assume a really serious aspect. At that hour a man on horseback rode rapidly by the Cudahy mansion, and as he passed the front gate he threw a letter into the yard. A servant took the letter into the house, where it was read. It was in substance: "Mr. E. A. Cudahy—Your son is safe. We have him and will take good care of him and will return him to you in consideration of a cash payment of $25,000. We mean business. JACK."

The remainder of the note the police refuse to present to disclose, as they say it relates to the place where the money is to be paid, and where the kidnappers are to leave the boy in case Mr. Cudahy complies with their terms. The servant who saw the man on horseback was able to give a good description of him, and this is the clue upon which the police are working at present.

Of a studious turn of mind, the young man was much devoted to his home and was idolized by his parents, being the only boy in a family of three children. Mr. Cudahy says he is willing to pay a liberal reward for the return of his son. As to the anonymous letter, however, he is undecided as to whether it emanates from the kidnappers or from some enemy who threw it in the yard with no purpose other than creating a furore.

As to the methods employed in the kidnaping but little is known at present. It is believed by some that Edward was decoyed away through the instrumentality of a boy about his own age, as two youths, one of whom answered the description of young Cudahy, were seen on a street north of the city west bound shortly before midnight.

Great Battle in Colombia. WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The state department has received a telegram from United States Charge d'Affaires Deane, at Bogota, stating that a great battle had been fought at Girardet Point, Magdalena river, Colombia. It lasted two days and resulted in a decisive victory for the government. It is reported that 600 were killed and many hundred wounded. Other victories by the government forces of the utmost importance have been achieved. The government is celebrating the victories and considers itself greatly strengthened by the success of its arms.

Sight in Answer to Prayer. CINCINNATI, Dec. 20.—A remarkable case of entire restoration of sight has been reported from near the town of Keokuk county, 133 miles from the city. The patient is that of the Rev. J. W. Hes, assistant at the Decatur Methodist Episcopal church on Decoursey creek. He is 27 years old. At the age of 17 he had an attack of measles and in four years his sight had vanished. He said: "About four years ago I was married without ever having seen my bride. One day I was reading a religious tract, and a number of the brethren and sisters went to Brother Wade's little log house, and all prayed earnestly for a return of my sight. Two of the friends put their hands on my head, and in the midst of the prayer four scales or catarracts fell off my eyes, and I saw my wife and my little child for the first time in my life."

General Lee at a Banquet. KANSAS CITY, Dec. 20.—General Fitz-Hugh Lee, commander of the department of the Missouri, last night was the honored guest of a banquet given by the Commercial club, given in commemoration of the signing of the John Jay treaty. The banquet, where 320 plates were laid, was the most elaborate ever given in the city. General Lee responded to the toast "Our Country," speaking extemporaneously. General Lee will remain in the city until tomorrow afternoon, when he will continue, with his headquarters at Jefferson City, Mo., to inspect the barracks there.

Our Lighthouse Service. WASHINGTON, Dec. 20.—The annual report of the United States lighthouse board shows that at the close of the fiscal year there were under the control of the lighthouse establishment 1,243 lighthouses and beacon lights, 4 light vessels in position, 8 light vessels for relief, 11 electric lighted buoys in position, 82 gas lighted buoys in position, 172 fog signals operated by steam, electric or oil engines, 1,788 post lights, 499 day beacons, 73 whistling buoys in position, 129 bell buoys in position and 4,794 other buoys, including piles and stakes in the Alaska district.

In Charge of Wilson's Office. NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 20.—Cyrus J. Cook, who was appointed receiver of the Order of Chosen Friends by the courts in Indianapolis, arrived here yesterday and took charge of the hotel and effects in the office of the late William B. Wilson, the alleged defaulting supreme treasurer of the order. He also made claim to the funds of the order on deposit in the Essex County N. Y. bank. The law firm of A. O. Keasbey & Sons is retained by the receiver to represent him in any litigation that may arise in New Jersey.
