

Social And Personal Doings. In The Woman's World

WOLVES of the SEA
BY RANDALL PARRISH

"LeVere."
"That's what I told the lads. He's gonner, I reckon?"
"I never saw him after we sank. Are all the men here?"
"All but those in the forward boat, sir. They got away first, an' we ain't had no sight of 'em since. Maybe we will when it gets daylight. Harwood's in charge. I give him a compass, an' old him ter steer west. Was that right?"
"All I could have told him, I haven't had an observation, an' it is all guess-work. I know the American coast lies to that direction, but that is about all. I couldn't tell if it be a hundred, or a hundred and fifty miles away. I must have been in bad shape when you pulled me in?"
"We thought you was gone, sir. You was bleedin' some, too, but only from flesh wounds. The young lady she just wouldn't let yer die. She worked yer yer for two or three hours, sir, afore I had any hope."
Her eyes were downcast and her face turned away, but I reached out and clasped her fingers. This was the night and ocean was motionless picture. Only an and gently pressed mine did I take courage, with a knowledge that she recognized and welcomed my presence.
"Watkins says I owe my life to you," said, so low the words were scarcely audible above the dash of water alongside. "It will make that life more doable than ever before."
She turned her head, and I felt her eyes searching the dim outline of my face questioningly.
"Of course I did everything I knew," she replied. "Why should I not? You're here, Captain Carlyle, for my sake; I owe you service."
"And must I be content merely with that thought?" I asked, far from pleased. "This would mean that your only interest in me arises from gratitude."
"And friendship," her voice as confidential as my own. "There is no reason why you should doubt that surely."
"It would be easier for me to understand, but for the memory of what I did—a bond share."
"Your meaning is that true friendship has as a basis equality?"
"Does it not? Can real friendship exist otherwise?"
"No," she acknowledged gravely. "And the fact that such friendship does exist between us evidences my faith in you. I have never felt this social distinction, Captain Carlyle, have given it no thought. This may seem strange to you, yet is most natural. You bear an honorable name, and belong to a family of gentlemen. You held a position of command, won by your own efforts. You bore the part of a man in a revolution; if guilty of any crime, it was a political one. In no way sullied your honor. I have every reason to believe you were falsely accused and convicted. Consequently that conviction does not exist between us; you are not my uncle's servant, but my friend—you understand me now?"
"And you would actually have me speak with you as of your own class—a free man, worthy to claim your friendship in life?"
"Yes," frankly, her face uplifted. "Why should it be otherwise? No man could have done more, or proved himself more staunch and true. We are in danger yet, but such peril is nothing compared with what I have escaped. I feel that your skill and courage will bring us safely to land. I am no longer afraid, for I have learned to trust you. You possess my entire confidence."
"But do you understand fully?" I questioned anxiously. "All I have done or you would have been done for any other woman under the same conditions of danger. Such service to another would have been a duty, and no more. But to be with you, aiding and protecting, has been a delight, a joy. Have served Dorothy Fairfax for her own sake—not as I could any other."
"Did you not suppose I knew?"
Her glance flashed into mine through its stare-glass, with a sudden message of revelation.
"You knew—that—that it was you personally I served?"
"Of course I knew. A woman is never unaware of such things. Now, ever, I must tell you the truth. I know you care for me, and have cared since first we met. An interest no less useful has led me to seek your acquaintance, and give you my aid. Surely it is not ungrudgingly for me to consent this when we face the chance of death together?"
"But," I stammered, "I can scarcely love you realize your words. I—I love you Dorothy."
"And is it not also possible for me to love?"
"You—you mean, you love me?"
"I love you—are you sorry?"
"Sorry! I am mad with the joy of yet stricken dumb. Dorothy Fairfax, I have never even dared dream of a message from your lips. Dear girl, do you forget who I am? I am not your future?"
"I forget nothing," she said, proudly. "It is because I know what you

MISS MUNSON TO CONFRONT DR. WILKINS

Beautiful Artist's Model Brought From Canada to Talk on Murder Case.

New York, March 31.—Dr. Walter Keene Wilkins, awaiting trial on a charge of slaying his aged wife at her Long Beach home, may be confronted today in his cell at Mineola by the beautiful Audrey Munson.
Miss Munson, who has appeared in many film productions, and is a widely known artist's model, will arrive with her mother from Canada today. She will talk with District Attorney Weeks. It was reported last night she would ask her to face the imprisoned doctor during the day.
She is expected to make interesting revelations about certain persons who called upon Dr. Wilkins in his Manhattan home at 164 West Sixty-fifth street, or loitered about the entrances there, where the Munsons had apartments.
The Burns National Detective Agency, which located Miss Munson, also made interesting discoveries of additional evidence at the Long Beach cottage late on Saturday which will be turned over to the District Attorney this morning. County Detective Carmichael aided the Burns operative, Allen C. Myers, in ferreting out this new evidence.
It was reported last night that the latest discoveries were made in a garage that adjoins the Wilkins cottage, and near which the body of the dying woman was found. The character of the new evidence is not disclosed. It is said, however, to involve a new witness, a man who saw Dr. Wilkins do certain things there prior to the murder, and located of the time by the doctor of things which he had said since the murder he had never seen.
CHAPTER XXVI.
A Floating Coffin.

The laboring boat rested so low in the water it was only as we were thrown upward on the crest of a wave that I could gain any view about through the pallid light of the dawn. It was all a desolate, restless waste in the midst of which we tossed, while above hung masses of dark clouds obscuring the sky. We were but a hurtling speck between the gray above and the gray below.

MISS MURRAY AT MEETING

Miss Grace M. Murray, Fairfield county suffrage organizer, will make a very interesting address before the members of the Stratford league, at their regular monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon at the court room at the town hall, Stratford. She will talk principally on the present conditions of the suffrage movement and will tell of her work as a county suffrage organizer.
President of the Stratford league, Miss Alice Judson, will preside at the meeting and introduce the speaker. The recent hearing of the suffrage cause at the state senate will form the basis of a very interesting discussion and Miss Murray will tell of the earnestness of the suffragists in their calm and patient work to obtain the vote. The 35,000 names of women who have signed the petitions of wanting the vote that were used as a measure in the parade before the hearing of the suffragists and anti-suffragists, will be more fully discussed, and Miss Murray will tell how the women did the work in obtaining the names.
Following the talk, the regular business work will be taken up and plans made for another meeting.

Hints For The Shopper

Rose and Mauve Frogs.
An unusual touch is given one model in flesh crepe de chine by frog fastenings of rose and mauve that stand out against the silk.
For the cotton numbers, several novelty weaves are used, including a fine saten, seco, crepes and open weaves.
The only sleeveless number in the line is shown in flesh cotton crepe; repeated, also, in crepe de chine. It is two-piece, the slipover jacket is loosely belted, the neckline elliptical and collarless, and the armholes fairly large. Silk braid makes the trimming.

Distinctive Patterns.
The flannelette line is interesting, because the patterns are most of them exclusive with this house, which does its own converting. Many of them are very different from the ordinary designs, particularly those which feature wide-stripe effects. All of the white grounds are bleached. The garments are shown in the heavy flannelette and in a lighter weave called Madras flannelette here.
One weave shows a fine speckled pattern that is double-faced, that is, such colors as rose and French gray are combined so that the outer side is rose, with the gray lining showing in turned-back lapels and facings.

Little Lace Trimming.
In these non-regulation blouses lace trimming apparently has little place, embroidery and open work being preferred. Contrasting bands and fabrics are likewise commonly used, such as dark black folds of taffeta on a light colored crepe de chine.

Voile Favored in Lingerie Numbers.
Of the fabrics used, cotton voile is a big item among the lingerie numbers, with linen second to it and some cotton crepe and nainsook.
Crepe de chine is the principal silk employed besides serges, taffetas, pongee and other silk crepe.

Taffeta is the medium for a smart Cossack blouse, with the familiar round neck and short sleeves. In place of a collar is a narrow standing folds of the material, tying at the front in a fringe ended bow. Fringed out taffeta ruffles, two on each sleeve and five around the bottom of the skirt are the entire trimming. A narrow taffeta gird catches the fullness of the blouse into the waistline.

"Cooks and waiters form new union," runs a local head-line. We're lost.—Peggy Travers.

WAR VETERAN IS Y. W. C. A. CHAUFFEUR.

Automobiles in Paris bear all kinds of impressive markings these days and not the least of these among the lineups bearing the national emblems of the allied countries and carrying delegates to and from the Peace Conference, is the motor with the Blue Triangle of the American Y. W. C. A. in bright blue paint on either door.
Its driver is the only man employed by the Y. W. C. A. for that organization who has entered the air service and once fell 1,800 feet, landing in some tree tops. As a result his heart has been permanently weakened.

Before the war he was an automobile racer and there isn't a thing about automobiles he doesn't know, according to his friends.
The Y. W. C. A. is putting that information to good use these busy days.

DEDICATION OF NEW BUILDING

National Board of Y. W. C. A. to Present Gift to City—Public Invited.

Following an informal opening on Saturday to the officers and committees of the Young Women's Christian association, the new recreation building, the Industrial Women's Service Center, will open for inspection to the public tonight at 8 o'clock when a special program has been arranged for the dedication and entertainment.
Rev. Gerald H. Beard, pastor of the Park street church, will make the dedicatory prayer and dedication service will be led by Dr. William Horace Day of the United church. Mrs. Albert E. Lavery, president of the Y. W. C. A., will welcome the guests of the evening with a short address. Among the speakers of the evening will be James G. Lullum of the Holmes & Edwards Co., who will talk from a manufacturer's point of view.
Miss Esther S. Flate, of New York city, recently returned from work in France under the supervision of the Industrial War Work will give a very interesting talk. She is one of the secretaries of the National Board of the Y. W. C. A., and the committee in charge of the dedication program are fortunate in securing Miss Flate's services. The Liberty Chorus will render several patriotic selections. The program has been made rather short, so that the public may have greater length of time in going through the building. Miss Ethel R. Sterling is serving as chairman of the program committee.

Parties and entertainments will be held every evening this week for the girls so that they may become acquainted with each other and celebrate the new building together. Miss Elizabeth S. Brown serves as director and executive secretary of the Industrial Women's Service Center. Miss Alice Perinichof, physical director, Miss Edith Brown, cafeteria supervisor, Miss Eleanor Emerson, club organizer, and Miss McCoy, business secretary.

Cyrus Janover Is Heard By Y. M. H. A.

An interesting talk was given to members of the Young Men's Hebrew association yesterday by Cyrus J. Janover, supervisor in charge of re-employment of soldiers, who are members of the association. It was also announced yesterday that the symposium class will meet on Friday evening at the Bridgeport Boys' club. Lieut. John Rogers has been selected to act as coach for the track athletes.

MRS. BENNETT TO TALK HERE

"The League of Nations and the Women of America" is the subject of a speech which Mrs. M. Toscon Bennett of Hartford will give before the Bridgeport Philosophical Society at their rooms in the Citizens' Building on Wednesday evening, April 2nd at 8 P. M. Mrs. Bennett has devoted several years to the active campaign for suffrage for women, and in 1917 joined what is known as the "militants."
In her suffrage work Mrs. Bennett has visited many states in the Union where she has campaigned up and down the state. She took part in the recent demonstrations in Washington and was arrested for participating in a demonstration at which a speech of President Wilson's on Democracy was burned. Mrs. Bennett will include in her speech the story of her prison experiences, and tell why she was one of the hunger strikers. The general public is invited to hear Mrs. Bennett, and especially those interested in prison reform, for Mrs. Bennett has some first hand knowledge which should prove valuable to those people who are trying to better conditions in penal institutions.

LITTLE BENNY'S NOTE BOOK

By LEE PAPE
I'm reading a book with a red cover called In the Days of the Round Table, all about knights fighting each other with spears, and tawking the way they use to tawk and different things, being pritty taxing even without the pictures, and tonite we was eating supper, I sed, Methinks this soop is good.
It sounds all rite, sed my sister Gladdis. Meaning I was making too much noise drinking it, and pop sed, And wads do you get that methinks stuff?
He's bin tawking like that all day, sed ma, its out of some book he's reading and its cruff to drive a perstion crazy.
Ods boddykins, methinks it didnt drive the people krazy wen they use to speak like that all the time, eftsoun, so methinks you should it jest in one day? I sed.
Izent that perfectly redickliss? sed ma.
I dont see much sents to it myself, sed pop. And we got past the soop and keop on eating, and I sed, Methinks theres a heck of a lot of pepper in these tomatoes, gasooks.
If you dont like a thing you dont haff to eat it, I've told you that awfent enuff, and I dont want you to call people gasooks, I dont care wat book yours reading, sed ma.
The boy means gasooks, its merely an old fashioned exclamation, sed pop, and ma sed, I dont care wat it is, I wont have him calling me one.
And we keop on eating supper and I sed, Mary come up, methinks I want some more buttir, gasooks.
Benny Potts, wat did I tell you, now this has gone far enuff, I dont like that word and I dont like any of those words, and if people use to tawk like that, it was there own business, and there's no reason I should suffer from it.
Benny, sed pop.
Sir? I sed.
