

Papers Approve King's Address

London, June 23.—Relief over the safe return of King George and Queen Mary from Belfast was expressed by today's newspapers, which also voiced appreciation of their courage in making the trip to open the Ulster parliament. Editorials warmly approved the king's address, especially his plea that the Irish "forgive and forget, and join in making for the land they love a new era of peace, contentment and good will."

The Daily News, however, strongly criticized the government which framed the speech for "simultaneously making a mockery and reproach of these moving words" by its decision to send more troops to the south of Ireland. The London Times also denounced the government for "dashing all hopes by decreasing intensified warfare in Ireland to the bitter end." It accused the government of failing to play the game with the king, who was said to have done all he could do.

Belief was strongly expressed by some papers that the opening of the Ulster parliament might lead eventually to the harmonious establishment of a parliament for united Ireland. Commentators reasserted that to grant full independence to Ireland was "utterly impossible" but they declared that Great Britain was entirely willing to allow the Irish to manage their own affairs in their own way. The Daily Telegraph, contending that in South and West Ireland the Irish already had secured more than their constitutional leaders asked, declared concessions would not long be withheld from a southern parliament which gave its hand in true friendship.

"It rests with Irishmen," the newspaper continued, "to say when that shall be. They are the arbiters of their own destiny."

Taking a similar view, the Chronicle maintained that "the perversity which flouts good prospects and invites bad is too abnormal to last forever, and the question is how far Southern Ireland will be carried along the path of ruin before it abandons it."

The Morning Post, which professed to see the beginning of a new epoch in the relations between Great Britain and Ireland in yesterday's ceremony, said the king's hopes for a future united and peaceful Ireland could "never be fulfilled until that country is delivered from the conspirators who let it in its fall."

What purported to be a copy of a letter Field Marshal Sir Henry Hughes Wilson, chief of the Imperial Staff, sent to Prime Minister Lloyd George, giving his reasons for not accepting the premier's invitation to attend yesterday's opening of the Ulster parliament was circulated today in Irish quarters here. The field marshal's reasons for declining to go to Belfast were given as follows: "Being the senior officer of the British army, I do not think it right or proper for me to be present. "In view of the fact the government appears determined to increase its pressure on the south and west of Ireland to bring the Sinn Fein rebellion to an end, and that orders for all troops to go over will emanate from me, I think, perhaps, it would bring politics into the army if, as preliminary to ordering thousands of troops over to crush the rebellion, I was seen to take part in the opening of the northern parliament."

The copy of the letter was printed in the Irish Bulletin, which said that it regarded the letter as "authentic proof of the military and political motives which dictated the partition of Ireland and the establishment of the Ulster parliament."

See Decided Change In Athens

Paris, June 23.—There has been a decided change of sentiment in Athens upon the allies' offer of mediation in the Turco-Grecian war and the impression is gaining ground that the Greek government will accept the allies' proposal with certain reservations, said a wireless dispatch from Athens today. Greece was warned that if she continued her war against the Turkish Nationalists she must bear the responsibility for developments in the Near East.
