

Big Time At Fairfield County Home Yesterday; Dedicate Athletic Field

(By "Faz" Ludlow.)
 You baseball fans! Just keep your eyes peeled, and watch out for these box scores about 10 years from now. "Bulger will pitch and Drake will catch." Umps McLaughlin may still be doing business and if he is you will hear these names wafted over the low tide breezes at Newfield park. For Bulger and Drake have signified their intention of starting their career with Bridgeport. Right now they are just about the whole works of the kids team at the Fairfield County Home at Norwalk, and between their natural ability and a little trickery that got by the umpire the kids dedicated their new athletic field by trimming Charlie Hart's Stars to the tune of 21 to 14.

The need of a play field has always been apparent, and after a lot of work the place is a reality, backstop and everything. All that is needed now is a chest protector, a mask, a few more gloves, and a couple of light bats for the smaller fry. The good people of Norwalk have given enough equipment for a flying start, and the kids have it in mind that "Babe" Ruth got his start in a children's home.

Equipment that was lacking yesterday was loaned by the General Electric team, and the fun was off when Jim Holt hit the first ball in the general direction of Wilton, and lost it for a home run. Incidentally, he lost 25 pounds, circling the bases, but anyone who knows "im" realizes that 25 pounds more or less is nothing in his young life.

Immediately after Tom Flaherty polished up the base lines by a slide into second base. He kicked the sack into left field and was out. A moment later he nearly went out for court when he caught a fly on his Adam's apple, and the ball bounced into center field for a two bagger. This was right after Frank Braithwaite had been credited with an assist when a ball bounced off his neck into left field and Louis Fenton caught it for a put out.

The game was close for a little while, until the kids staged a rally in the third inning. During this inning the smaller children were taken to support, and when they came back the kids were still batting. Holt was lifted as a pitcher and Bill Brown took his place. He was awful. It was alleged that the two biggest boys were doing all of the batting while the little fellows did the running. The umpire was appealed to but he couldn't tell the difference because the kids were all dressed alike and besides the sun was in his eyes.

Just at this juncture the two prettiest school teachers at the home, who had been keeping score, left, and the sunshine immediately went out of the game. In fact, clouds began to gather in short order, and before everyone could get under cover an A. No. 1 storm broke and stopped the batting rally. There was a scurry for cover and Mrs. Emily Crawford picked up "Al Arthur" McGinty, three years old next March, and headed for the house. Holt followed and lost another 25 pounds on the grade. Bill Steinke was a W. O. L., but two other fellows, doing a "sister" act under the name of Eagan and Flaherty, made up the tonnage.

The most thoughtful man in the vicinity was William J. Crawford, superintendent. He knew just what was going to happen. When the storm was over and the beaten ball players crawled out from under the principal Ford in Norwalk, he had the greatest array of dry shirts in captivity, all draped on a couch for the Bridgeport team, was thoroughly soaked. Any man that can secure up that many clean shirts on short notice must be wealthy. One little fellow drew a sport shirt as big for him that Mrs. Crawford, the matron thought it was a nightie and started to put him to bed with the kids.

"Al Arthur" McGinty is the youngest of the children. His two older sisters are also at the home. He was the mascot of the team, but he failed to be interviewed last night. Bulger made a speech and apologized for the beating his team gave the visitors. He got no further for the rest of the boys and girls cheered for seven minutes.

The pleasantest part of the evening, outside of possibly the supper, was when the well known Criterion quartet put on a program in the school opera house, billed by Bill Brown, that will keep the children happy until Christmas rolls around and the quartet make their annual Yuletide visit to entertain. There is no place in the quartet, but their offerings are more appreciated. James Holt, bass; Louis Fenton, first tenor; George Toroff, baritone; and George Lush, second tenor, form the musical organization with Frank Braithwaite doing recitations, announcements and adding to the "pep" of the team who eats cheese with a soup spoon.

The quartet, always in demand, filling many singing engagements throughout the State, are already engaged for next Play Day by the Waterbury Elks, and sometimes sing for the Columbia records, as well as over the radio circuit, but the Christmas engagement is always at the Norwalk home. Right now those kids are wishing their lives away, wanting Christmas to come so that they can have more fun. Braithwaite's newest recitation, a "razz" on the circus that has no parade, was the big hit of the evening, for the orphans missed their annual pep at the elephant this year, and they will never quite forgive the circus that didn't have any parade.

The dedication was a big success, and it was nearly midnight when the music was over, and the sleepy urchins, including one little fellow suffering with prickly heat, got quiet and things were reported "back to normalcy." The thunder storm during the evening passed by without notice because there was so much noise inside the building when the moon did a lock-step all over the institution singing "Down the Field." A big happy day finally came to an end. The big kids were just as happy as the little boys and girls that have nothing to do but eat and sleep, play and keep clean, and do their little bit to help Mr. and Mrs. Crawford keep things neat and orderly.

The boys who play on the ball team are Drake, Bulger, Blair, Wagner, Goldspon, Kronglone, Ember, Bartram, Strain, and McGinty.

The men from Bridgeport who did their darndest to play ball were James Holt, Paul Jones Egan, Tom Flaherty, Louis Fenton, Charlie Hart, Frank Braithwaite, Henry T. Crawford, Bill Brown, George Toroff, George Lush, Fax-Roger L., and William Haefner.

"OPEN HOUSE" AT CLUB
 "Open House" will be held tonight at the club-house of the sixth district Republican club on North Main St., an entertainment including music and sports having been planned by the committee in charge. The club has perfected its plans for extensive Americanization work in the district for the benefit of the non-English speaking residents. Lectures in Italian, Yiddish and other foreign languages have been engaged to explain the advantages of citizenship to the aliens of the neighborhood.
