The Ninth Mill End Sale Now Going On.

Mill Ends are Just as Good and a Whole Lot Cheaper.

Mill Ends are Bargains—true bargains—bargains with a reason and with a vengeance. Some people side step bargains—it's unwise to side step TRUE Bargains—Mill End Bargains, because a piece of dress goods to sell in the regular way must contain sixty yards of goods and because a Mill End may contain only twenty-five yards doesn't make one lot of difference in the Mill End's desirableness or value to you. But it does in its price. It about cuts it in two—THAT'S SOME DIFFERENCE. Odd Garments and odds and ends of Usefuls—because they are not here in full lines and assortments have received the same treatment. They are just as good and a whole lot cheaper. A few prices will do you good.

POLI'S

"CHINATOWN CHARLIE."

There is surely no need to patronize one of the so-called "rubberneck" seeing New York automobiles when a visit to "Chinatown Charlie," the melodrama to be presented at Poli's this afternoon and evening, insures such sights as are usually included in a half dozen trips aboard one of those monstrous perambulators. No matter how many excursions are made in charge of a guide whose stock in trade consists chiefly in an assortment of megaphone stunts, the visitor to the theater where "Chinatown Charlie" is being offered, guarantees a far better and much more a remarkable exhibition of hard shoe dancing. The shoes rattle against the hard floor like the rattle of a snare drum and with just as much rhythm. Every "syllable" of the four pairs of shoes is remarkably distinct. It reminds one of the clink of the castanets of the Spanish dancers. Miss Sadie Julia Gompers, "The Girl with the Union Label," is becoming more popular at every performance and her son, "Smile on Me," has made a big hit this week. Miss Gompers is the daughter of Samuel Gompers, the president of the American Federation of Labor. Other features of the bill are Myles McCarthy & Co in "A Race Tout's Dream," Claude Frederick's educated pony "Don," Bowers, Walters and Crookek, Howard and Rutherford, the Majestic Trio, and the electrograph. Prices 10, 20 and 30 cents evenings; matinee, 1.00 seats for ladies at 10 cents, a few reserved at 20 cents. Tel 1090.

TILLMAN'S REMEDY.

Senator Tillman of South Carolina talks of curing a cold. Senator Tillman of South Carolina, while in lower Maryland the other day, looked "glum;" but to a Baltimore Sun correspondent he explained that he had a cold, a headache and a few other things. And he seemed rather worried because the cold would not disappear, so he declared he was trying to starve it. For more than twenty-four hours the senator ate nothing but a few crackers and drank a glass of milk, but he declared he could speak for two hours at any time without feeling any bad effects. His idea is starving the cold out sounds good when he reasons it out—that is, to a layman. He argues that food naturally causes blood-making, and that blood-making irritates that particular part of the mucous membrane. By refraining from eating nature will have an opportunity to scatter the inflammation so that the cold can get well.

After he told what he was doing to himself the senator laughed and declared that he supposed the old wagon was getting ramshackle, for his pet prescription for a cold failed to work on him any more.

"What is the pet?" he was asked. "Perhaps you can get results with it," he said, "so I'll tell you about it."

"Get plenty of hot water—just as hot as you can stand it—and soak your feet. See that you get into bed immediately after soaking your feet and cover up well lest you get chilled. The other ingredients you can have served you in bed. Have some more real hot water and cut up three lemons, allowing the skins to remain, and put them into the water. Next you get a good tumbler of rye whiskey and place your hat on the bed post.

"Just keep your eyes on the bed post and drink until you see two hats. You may get into a little sweat, but when you waken up in the morning you'll feel like a two-year-old."

AN UNUSUAL PUBLICATION. Every week there is issued from the presses of the New York World a section of the Sunday paper known as the Sunday World Magazine. This publication is to-day in the lead of all others in the world, so far as mechanical production is concerned. The make-up of the pages, the pictorial excellence and novelty, and the distribution of color throughout put it in the class of wonder works. Twenty years ago such a collection of pages would have set the country agog. Even ten years ago such a thing would have been practically impossible.

"SHADOWS OF THE PAST."

The average play nowadays usually depends for its success upon some element foreign to the real story of the plot. The American flag is waved wildly, mock heroes are indulged in, the pathos is turned sometimes to the burlesque and the comedy depends on the liberal use of the slap stick rather than the exercise of true wit. Lincoln J. Carter in his successful drama, "Shadows of the Past," has written a simple, plain story appealing so directly to the heart and mind of the auditor that it entitles his interest and gains his sympathy from the opening speech and holds it with ever increasing force until the final word is spoken. This play will be seen at Poli's Friday afternoon and evening. Prices, matinee 15 and 25 cents; evening 25, 35 and 50 cents.

"IF I WERE KING."

"If I Were King," Justin Huntly McCarthy's thrilling and engrossing romance, in which E. H. Sothern scored one of his greatest and most decided successes a season or so ago at the Garden theater in New York will be presented here next Saturday afternoon and evening at Poli's theater with Lester Lonergan in the role of Francois Villon, the vagabond poet and hero, a cast of uniform excellence and the same gorgeous and costly production used by Mr Sothern during his triumphant run in New York. Of all the swashbuckling and romantic plays of the modern stage not one approaches in point of consistency of plot, exciting action and rare and exquisite poetry the play of "If I Were King." The story has to do with the experience of Francois Villon, a poet of France, who besides making ballads to the beauty of the ladies of his day, has written burning criticisms of the manner in which the French government is conducted under the reign of that crafty old monarch, Louis I. Mr Lonergan, who will appear in the character of Francois Villon, is admirably suited to the difficult and active part. By reason of a long and especially brilliant association with the contemporary stage, during which time he has appeared in a long and interesting repertoire, Mr Lonergan is splendidly able to interpret the poetical part of Francois Villon. Mr Lonergan will doubtless be best remembered by local theatergoers because of his performance of Macbeth with Modjeska and with Nance O'Neill. Prices, matinee 25 and 50 cents; evening, 25, 35, 50 and 75 cents. Sale of seats Friday, January 25. Tel 1094.
