Battleships as Told by Special Photographs

WRECK OF SPAIN'S CRACK BATTLESHIP, THE VIZCAYA.

From Photographs Taken Specially for the Sunday Call.

No words could so eloquently convey the effects of a heavy storm of modern naval projectiles as these photographs of the splendid ship that was once Spain's and now is gone by right of conquest. All the pictures on this page are different aspects of the same ship.

The ship, like a mammoth, lies1 on the bottom of the sea, the great guns pointing heavenward, and the main deck and upper works separated from the hull by a gulf of . . .

The bark, though lost, is not forgotten, and the pictures which we bring forward today are the result of a special expedition to the spot where the ship lies, where the pictures were taken. The ship is one of the most interesting objects in the world, and the pictures are of great interest to the public.

The pictures show the ship as it lies on the bottom of the sea, the great guns pointing heavenward, and the main deck and upper works separated from the hull by a gulf of water. The ship is a magnificent object, and the pictures are worthy of the subject.

The ship is the Vizcaya, a Spanish battleship, and the pictures are taken from the sea, showing the ship as it lies on the bottom of the sea.

The ship is a magnificent object, and the pictures are worthy of the subject. The pictures show the ship as it lies on the bottom of the sea, the great guns pointing heavenward, and the main deck and upper works separated from the hull by a gulf of water.

The ship is the Vizcaya, a Spanish battleship, and the pictures are taken from the sea, showing the ship as it lies on the bottom of the sea.