men on the Pacific Coast, and they propose to use their influence to obtain the adoption by Congress of Rear Admiral Bradford's recommendation for a comprehensive survey of the Pacific Ocean. Captain Todd in his annual report will strongly urge that Congress be asked to make an appropriation which will enable the department to fit out a ship to make the survey, and Rear Admiral Bradford, chief of equipment, will incorporate this recommendation in his report.

Naval attaches of Germany, Great Britain and Japan have taken considerable interest in the proposal of the Navy Department for a survey, and they have suggested the advisability of the participation of their governments. If these governments should act with the United States in this matter it is pointed out that the ocean could be divided and each nation survey that section which is especially important to its commercial interests or in the vicinity of its insular possessions.
