THAT TEA APPOINTMENT.

Collector Jackson Refuses to Sip a Cup With Inquisitive Broker Bellingall.

P. W. Bellingall, customs broker, has addressed another letter to Colonel Jackson, Collector of Customs, asking that the Collector refer to the Secretary of the Treasury Bellingall's contention that the Secretary had acted illegally and without authority when he appointed an inspector of teas or an examiner of teas for the port of San Francisco.

The Collector has addressed a diplomatic note to Broker Bellingall intimating that the Collector had no doubt whatever that the Secretary of the Treasury knew what he was doing when he made the appointment, and that it would therefore be a work of supererogation and of several other many-syllabled words for him to ask the Secretary of the Treasury whether that exalted official was sure he was right before he went ahead with the appointment. In conclusion the Collector suggested that perhaps Mr. Bellingall might himself ask the Secretary of the Treasury about it.
