CONSCIENCE. You may cradle conscience, however you will, With sophistry soothe it, and bid it be still, From lallubys all no advantage you'll reap— You never, no never, can rock it to sleep.

BORROWING. You may borrow to-day and also to-morrow. Going on step by step from borrow to borrow, But one thing is certain, you should not forget, You never can borrow yourself out of debt.

IDLERS AND GRUMBLERS. Don't stand in your tracks doing nothing but grun

But start for a run if you meet with a tumble; You had better be scoured by rubs in the dust, Than to be in your idleness eaten by rust. SLANDER.

For making a slander, the fact will appear, That two things are needed—a tongue and an car; The absence of one against slander secures— Whoever finds tongue, let the ear be not yours. THE INWARD MONITOR.

man in his judgment may blinded be, The path of duty unable to see; But there is an inward monitor near, Whose whispers rise from the heart to the ear, And if that monitor he will obey, From the path of right he'll not go astray.

IDLENESS. Ah, well may the slothful, in Idlenss falter, If aimless and worthless, with naught to pursue— The path to the prison steps, to the halter, The key to the work-house is "nothing to do." ENVY.

Some men are envied because of their wealth, Who envy others because of their health; And whether it be in palace or cot, One will ever sigh for another's lot, And the blessings of life be unenjoyed, While envy is keeping the mind employed.

PRIDE. No man should carry his head so high That he cannot downward cast his eye;
For some mis-step be may chance to make,
And the haughty head, in falling, break.

THE ANGELS OF THE HOUSE.

'Tis said that ever round our path The unseen angels stray,
That give us blissful dreams by night And guard our steps by day. But there's an angel in the house,

Meek, watchful and sincere, That whispers words of hope to us When none beside are near; It is the one, the chosen one,
That's linked to us for life,
The angel of the happy home,
The faithful, trusting wife.

'Tis said that angels walk the earth-I'm sure it must be so--When round or path, scarce seen by us, Such bright things come and go. Are there not beings by our side

As fair as angels are?
As pure, as stainless as the forms
That dwell beyond the star? Yes: there are angels of the earth,
Pure, innocent, and mild,
The angels of our hearts and homes,
Each loved and loving child.

BE TRUE. - Be true to yourselves -- true to each other—true to God. What more abhorent vice than deception? The face covered with smiles and the heart rotten as a sepulchre. The hand first blinding your eyes, and then leading you to the preipiee. The tongue beguiling your face with honied words, and sharpening its arrows to launch at your back. Knowles, Wm G sharpening its arrows to launch at your back. Oh! that inestimable jewel of truth-truth in the tongue, in the life, in every manifesta-tion of the reason, the love, the passions of humanity.

Terrible to the young heart is the first de-Luckett, Thos Ludley, J W ception. She who looked all purity, all angelic goodness, betrayed her trust, and left your soul desolate. Heaven only knows through what depths of darkness the bruised spirit struggled to light and joy again. But the light has never been as pleasant, the joy when the light has never been as pleasant, the joy never been as re-kindled burns not like the brighter fires of long ago. The tears, the sleepless nights, the hours of keen despair, when a hand seemed even on your throat, and a dagger at your seemed the control of Death would be more welcome.

We could bear with petulance, smile at unkindness—the assaults of harsh temper, or the moody silence of a frowning brow; but treachery, faithlessness, trust betrayed—thank God that we have never known the full import of those terrible words!

Be true, then, if you would be respected. No power on earth can change the flat that Richhart, A even the world gives the deceiver. He may Ross, Thomas weep tears of blood, but the monuments of his own shame still stand to testify against him.
Once a liar, always a liar. A very child can tell where deception conceals itself, and a Shellon, J J casual thought, lightly expressed, ferrets it from its hiding glace.

Be true if you would be loved. The heart Stewert Capet is like an army; bristling and harmless seem the long rows of bristling steel—but every one of those polished shafts may be used as an instrument of torture.

So if you deceive the heart that beats

warmly for your love, your approbation may be converted into a gallery of deadly weapons, and you will be responsible for the mischief van Sickle, J W that results through life's long battle. Let truth be as dear to you as the apple of your eye; and when the blush springs not to your cheek, and your tongue falters not even at the unuttered thought of deception, then be sure. Waters, Dr.J. W unuttered thought of deception, then be sure that you are neither fit for earth or heaven— | Watkins, Wm for the society of men or angels.

THE TOMB OF RACHEL.—The Hon. James Wiley, James Brooks, senior editor of the New York Ex- Williams. TR press, writes as follows to that journal from wison, J the Holy Land: "Upon my return to Bethlehem, I rode by Christian, Jew and Moslem all agree that this is the spot where Rachel was buried, and all unite in honoring it. The Turks are anxious that their ashes may rest near hers, and hence their bodies Corner Main St. and Plaza, Placerville. have been strewn under the tombs all around the simple grave of Rachel. The sweet domestic virtues of the good wife have wor their love and admiration, as the tomb of Absalom, near the Brook of Kedron, their detestation-upon the latter they throw a stone, to mark their horror of the disobedient son, while around the former they wish, when they die, their bodies may be interred. "Nor is this wonderful. The wife worth fourteen year, service as a shepperd, must J. L. SMITH. have been worth having. The whole life of Rachel is, indeed, one of the most touching in Biblical history. The sweet Shepherdess has PARLOR, BOX AND COOKING left her mark upon the memory of man, as well as upon her tomb. The tribute to her is the tribute paid to a good wife, and infidel, and Jew, and Christian, all combine to pay it .-The great women of the earth—the Zenobias and Cleopatras-have died, been buried, and their place of burial been forgotten; but to this day stands over the grave of Rachel, not the pillar Jacob set up, but a modern monument in its place, around which swarm pilgrims from every land under the sun, in respect and reverence for the faithful wife and good mother in Israel."

The wenerable lady of a celebrated physician, one day casting her eyes out of the win-dow, observed her husband in the funeral sion of one of his patients, at which she exclaimed: "I do wish my husband would keep away from such processions,-it looks so much like a tailor carrying home his work.'

"Yes," said a kind mother who was teachthe her fittle son his Sunday school lesson, "Oain was a fugitive and vagabond upon earth; he was so had that he thought every man would slay him. Where could wicked
