MARCH 27 1879.

SHORT LIVED.—The Lottery Bill which was offered in the House on Tuesday, was yesterday called up and rejected.

THE BILL to convert $800,000 of the State debt into 4 1/2 per cent. bonds payable in 1880, passed the House on Tuesday. This is a wise measure, and should it pass the Senate and our 6 per cent. bonds be successfully converted, will prove the most economical one that has been passed for many years.

GENERAL TERRY, who is good authority on such matters, does not believe Sitting Bull will make an unprovoked attack on the whites. Perhaps not, but battles are frequently started by the irresponsible "bummers" of one side or the other, and even a competent commander like Sitting Bull cannot expect to be free of these.

It is perfectly ridiculous in such men as Anthony, Conkling and Hamlin to fret and whine about the changes that are being made in the offices of the Senate. They did not show a particle of mercy toward the men whose places they themselves crowded into; nor had they any mercy on the Democratic office holders whom they voted to supersede with Republicans. Their lamentations should be treated with contempt or ridicule which they certainly merit.

A GREAT MANY CITIZENS doubt the propriety of the City Council undertaking at this time the erection of new city buildings. It is quite certain that two buildings erected with a single wall between cannot be so readily ventilated or as easily lighted as though they were built separately. This matter will require much consideration by the Levy Court as well as by the City Council. A conclusion so important ought not to be arrived at without first ascertaining whether in erecting both buildings together we may not find we have blocked out the light and air in so far as to render the new houses subject to some of the same objections that are now raised against the old ones.

SILVER REMONETIZATION IN ENGLAND.—Our earnest and confident "single gold standard" contemporaries seem not to have heard that the "Council of the Chamber of Commerce of Liverpool has adopted a resolution in favor of an international agreement for the remonetization of silver." Such is the late news by telegram. Was this change in England caused by contraction? Did not the curtailment of money, in the demonetization of silver, take away a great part of the purchasing power of the people? and would not such a state of affairs prevent the sale of all property and commodities at prices that did not rule lower, including also the reduction of labor and prices of labor? We are not prepared to assert that this is a certain consequence of demonetization—but it looks very plausible. If there is just one million of gold dollars in a city and one million silver dollars to buy with, and afterward the silver should be declared not money, and gold only money, certainly there is less money to use, and the one that has the gold is enabled to buy property much lower than he could when his neighbor was allowed to be a competitor with silver.

THE DEMOCRATIC PARTY cannot afford to be a party to any system of laws that deprives the people of a right to change their rulers. This is what the Federal Election Laws were enacted for, and it is the first duty of a representative Democrat to see that they are repealed. Some have argued that these laws will be favorable to the Democrats when their party secures power. But this is only another reason why they should be repealed. We do not understand that the Democratic party is to seek the good of its own members only. It is right and proper that its own members should enjoy the privileges of office and official patronage when the party fairly succeeds in winning the battle of ballots. But the great aim of the Democratic party is the good of the whole people. Nor should the Democratic party allow its members to be hedged up and prevented the freedom of the ballot until their opponents let down the obstructions and give way because they have no ability to make further resistance. It is the duty of the party to act in harmony against the common foe until each member of the Democratic party has as free and unobstructed right to the polls as any of their opponents. And this is just what the Democratic caucus of both Houses of Congress has resolved upon. We hope the attitude will be maintained and that the President, seeing the justice of the action, and that it does not place the Republican party on an unequal ground, will, as it is said he will, sign the appro-pration bills when passed with the requisite amendments, and suffer Congress to adjourn and harmony and good feeling to prevail in all parts of the country. At present the Democrats have not an equal chance at the polls. The U. S. Marshals are all Republicans and they arrest only Democrats at elections, and there is great danger of collisions at all elections between the election officers on occasion of such arrests.

SOME MATTERS that were considered trifling during the inflation period now begin to pinch in Pennsylvania. As there are efforts in Delaware to induce the General Assembly to embark in projects of a somewhat similar character, we have copied from the Lancaster Examiner, a Republican paper of much ability, the following extracts from an article in opposition to the further outlay of money for the maintenance of institutions that are held to be unnecessary and matters of a local character and somewhat of luxury. Here in Delaware we have wisely concluded not to indulge in such luxuries, or to do it very moderately. In Pennsylvania these matters have become oppressive, and the Examiner says:

"Reference is made elsewhere to that fraud and failure called an Agricultural college. Why should it receive $80,000 of the people's money? Then there is the Morganza reform school, moved at great expense from Allegheny City up into Washington county. It has proved a delusion and a snare, and an expensive one at that—in a financial sense at least. The expense of its maintenance, and the order and mismanagement, and had better be left to its fate without further bolstering up by the State.

"The military establishment of the State costs $150,000 a year, and the Legislature might well consider if this is not a rather large price to pay for the luxury of playing soldier in time of profound peace. The expense of our soldiers' orphans' schools, fifteen years after the close of the war, is $250,000 a year— isn't it about time these private enterprises were looking to some other source of support than the State treasury? The normal schools bleed us at the rate of a hundred thousand dollars every year, and will bear close watching. Finally, one session of the Legislature costs the State $500,000, not counting the $40,000 expended for that monstrous call on the Legislature record. This item of public expenditure is simply outrageous.

The Washington Post is actually embarrassed with prosperity. A little more than a year ago Mr. Stilson Hutchins, a poor boy from Kansas or some other extreme Western State, entered the Capital on a free pass. He started his paper without a dollar, the first number being worked on a cheese press. Now he is setting up a $20,000 Hoe perforating press, which will print both sides of his paper at once and better each sheet, and is threatening to start a Sunday-school edition on the first day of the week. Mr. Hutchins wears a shirt with collars and cuffs detached, has a horse-shoe scarf pin, and a dog, carries a switch cane, drives a pair of mouse-colored horses, and can be seen any day hobnobbing with Congressmen, who are apparently willing to borrow money from him. He is actually a power in the land. Early rising and strict attention to business did it.—Holt, Gazette.

The Hartford Elopement.

Nothing Known Yet of the Whereabouts of Gov. Hubbard's Daughter. HARTFORD, CONN., March 25.—Ex-Governor Hubbard has not up to this time received any communication from his daughter, Miss Nellie Hubbard, who eloped on Saturday with Frederick Shepard, the family coachman, and the whereabouts of the two is as much of a mystery as at first. Miss Hubbard is ex-Governor Hubbard's youngest daughter, and is seventeen years old. Shepard is about thirty, is rather pleasing in appearance, and his parents are respectable people, living in this city. He had been the employ of the Hubbard family about a year and a half, and before that was a hackman. His education had been neglected, and it is said Miss Hubbard became interested in him by helping him to improve it. Of late he had driven her out with unusual frequency. They were married on March 11 in Westfield, Mass. On that day Miss Hubbard said in the morning that she was going to visit a friend in this city. She was away during the day. It is not known that Shepard made any particular excuse for his absence. The marriage was kept secret from the Hubbard family until Saturday. On Friday, Shepard told his parents of the marriage, and after giving them the marriage certificate and asking them to break the news to the Hubbard family. On Saturday while Miss Hubbard, or Mrs. Shepard, was still at home, the certificate and a notice of the marriage were sent to Governor Hubbard. The latter questioned his daughter, who admitted everything. Later in the day she left which had been placed upon her, and went by the train to New Haven, where she met Shepard.

Although nothing is positively known of their whereabouts it is believed that the couple went to New York City to wait for the matter to get well talked over and forgotten. It was rumored this evening that they had returned to this city and were seeking to effect a reconciliation but the report was found to be wholly without foundation. They have sufficient money in their possession to maintain themselves for the present. It is a somewhat singular fact that Shepard has not communicated in any way with his parents or relatives since he informed his father of the marriage. In fact all parties show a disinclination to communicate with each other and although Shepard's parents had anticipated inquiries from Governor Hubbard's family there has been no communication since the marriage certificate was transferred to Governor Hubbard. The latter has not yet made any attempt through the police authorities to recover his daughter, and his friends say that he persists in his determination not to see her again.

Fleeing in Chicago. A streak of lightning has struck the pocket of the father of Joseph Bond, of East Bradford township, Chester county, to the effect that while in Chicago a few days ago Joseph was dined out of $450 by gamblers. The latter let Joseph with $10 at first, but he soon got to laughing on the other side of his mouth. Having lost all of his loose change, one of the gamblers suggested that, if Joseph desired to retire that he might get a pocket watch and money, there was a clock handy. Joseph dismissed the clock accommodation, and pulling off his boot, took out from the top $450, with which he had been supplied to Chicago. How the $450 winged itself off the young man doesn't remember, but it did.

Coal Mines to Resume. SCRANTON, March 26.—Receiver McCabe, of the Pennsylvania Anthracite Coal Company, has arranged to resume work at the Pines Mine to-day, and at two other mines next week.

Mr. Finney, a London dentist, claims to have found a filled tooth in the jaw of an Egyptian mummy. Dentistry further on had been practiced in Egypt than it is supposed.

Don Carlos, who has been little heard of for some time, is understood to be writing a history of his late fatal campaign.

Milanesse ladies are to present a gold medal to Queen Margarine in compliment to her presence of mind on Passanante's attack on King Humbert.

A German dealer in bird trimmings for ladies' hats has just received a consignment of 30,000 dead humming birds, 80,000 corpses of aquatic birds, and 800,000 pairs of wings.

CONSUMERS OF

COD LIVER OIL.

Knowing from experience the dissatisfaction so often attending the dispensing of many of the emulsions in the market I would call your attention to some of the features of the emulsion which I have prepared and dispensed for years with unvarying satisfaction. The oil used is the finest Norwegian and the most superior; it is extracted in the choice of all material and in every detail of its manufacture. By careful manipulation this emulsion is made with the smallest possible amount of gum, and by the very minute division of the oil globules is rendered very fluid and perfectly palatable. Each tablespoonful contains 50 per cent. of oil and 5 grains of Hypophosphite of Lime. Samples will be gladly furnished to all Physicians who may desire them.—Put up in pint bottles, price $1.
