RE YOURSELF!
Dr. Bohannan's Vegetable Curative" is warranted to cure all forms of Spermatorrhœa or Seminal Weakness, Impotency, etc., and restored and brings back the "Youthful Vigor" of life, destroyed it by sexual excesses or evil habits from two to seven weeks' time. This remedy has been used by Dr. Bohannan in his private practice for over thirty years, and is now known to the profession as the WORST CASES. It gives vitality and strength with wonderful effects to those middle aged men whose sexual weakness is beyond their years. Its invigorating effects are felt at once. Young men suffering from the commencement of that dreadfully destructive habit of self-abuse can use this medicine with the assurance of a speedy and PERMANENT cure. The patient will feel the tone and elasticity of spirits at once, as that medicine acts directly on the parts affected as a soothing and healing balm, restoring to the relaxed seminal vessels and ducts, imparting power and tone and restoring them to their natural state, the same as if the parts had never been indulged in. The ingredients in the production of nature—barks, roots, herbs, and gums, are all that is used in the manufacture of this wonderful specific for the above diseases.
Pamphlets, Free Indorsers, sent, with full directions, etc. Sold by druggists in all North Fifth street between Washington avenue and Chestnut, St. Louis, Mo. Established in 1857. Dr. C. A. Bohannan's "Private and Special Diseases," which gives a full description of the nature, symptoms, means of cure of SYPHILIS, SEMINAL WEAKNESS, Etc., sent to any address upon receipt of one stamp.

MARRIAGE SECRETS
A Book of nearly 300 pages, numerous engravings, just published, reveals secrets which the married need and those contemplating marriage should know. How to cure diseases. Hundred of recipes. Address Dr. C. A. BOHANNAN, 602 North Fifth street, St. Louis, Mo.

Letter from Samuel Townsend.

For the DELAWARE GAZETTE.

A few words to those who try to bend every person to the interest of Newark College; and all whom they cannot warp or bend they insult. I have known their policy of getting money for a long time before they got their lick-spittle, coon and ape-headed squirt and newspaper Ledger to slander all persons who would not bend to their policy, for they well know their proposition to the late Legislature was an indirect offer of bribe; for what right had one member to select one boy out of his Hundred and appropriate $200 a year out the tax-payers' pockets to educate him, and they did not care if said members selected their own sons, as a member not 20 miles from here it is said did a few years ago. And further, every sensible man of them knew that if the door was opened to give them $6,000, with equal propriety four or five other institutions could have made similar demands; and when they finally could not get the $6,000 for the pretended scholarships they begged outright for $2,000 to pay Mr. H. S. McComb—a cool request, indeed, for a debtor to call on a Legislature to pay his debts. I could not stand idly by and see such attempts on the State Treasury, but the instant I wrote a line against them in the GAZETTE they started their curly-tailed fiste to barking at me in the one-eyed mule Ledger, and I have borne with him until I had to tell him plainly of the species he represents. The coon represents a sneak in the dark, and an ape a mimic—the two combined would, I suppose, make just such a fellow as would suit his employers at Newark. But I have this consolation. Let me be what I may in the eyes of the Newark College men, a large majority of the Legislature thought as I said, and refused to sanction the Newark schemes. And I say it cheerfully that Newark College had in Mr. Cooch, brother of the Senator, one of the best and most gentlemanly advocates it ever had at Dover.

But the fates were against him. It would not do to open the door of the State Treasury to any college to the exclusion of others, and if to all, there was no knowing how soon a revolution would take place between the rich and poor. It is better for all persons to unite on the common ground of the free school system, and those persons wishing their children to have a sectarian or classical education pay for it themselves extra. This fellow that runs the Newark Ledger first called me pig-head, although my cranium measures 7¾ inches, and of course I had to retort, and in recollecting him and thinking over a suitable description, I thought the coon and ape combined would about meet his case; and young man, not your coon head, as you refer to that, I said would debar your entrance to the Kingdom of Heaven. It was your cross of both coon and ape, and your general deformity that the Scriptures speak of. You take exceptions to that and say the Scripture declares no drunkard shall enter the Kingdom of Heaven. That of course gives me no alarm, for I never was drunk; but I am surprised at your religious masters in Newark allowing you to make such sweeping charges against drunkards. Have you not been drunk? Are you not now on a kind of probation, having to hide from the sight of a whiskey bottle? But Mr. Coon and Ape you were in good company that no man need be ashamed of. Is it not admitted that God knows everything? Therefore, when he determined to deluge the world and drown all but a few, did he not select Noah to build a boat called an ark, to hold just such as God wanted to re-people the world after the deluge? And does not the Scriptures tell you that after the ark rested on Mount Arrarat, Noah got drunk? Now did not God know this before hand? And it further says that Noah had an ungrateful son; that after his father saved him, he made fun of the old gentleman whilst drunk, and he (Noah) put a curse on him. Then again when God determined to make another change in the world's arrangement, does not the Testament tell you that Christ's mother had him with her at a little merry-making one evening, and that the wine ran out, and that there appeared great mortification at such an unlooked for event, and when the mother of Christ found out the trouble she told them to make themselves easy, that her son could turn water to wine. The jars were filled up with water and Christ immediately turned the water to wine, and the good time continued until morning. I suppose, young man, talking about liquor, all grain and fruit have spirits in them, and every human being that eats bread or fruit, or both, and drinks water, is a still; and those that add distilled spirits by another process causes drunkenness, if he takes too much, which I suppose has been your case. Your reference to a porpoise, in your last, does not strengthen your case. The porpoise swims generally in deep salt water, coming to shoal water sometimes to feed, but there he makes a noise to give warning; whereas the coon will steal, in the night time as quietly as possible, to the nearest hen roost and rob his neighbor; and an ape would giggle at the trick. As to the Lottery Bill I was not in Dover during its brief career. The old Lottery Bill I favored to save the issuing of State bonds at that time, but had not this late abortion Lottery Bill a $60,000 item in it for Newark college. It is you and your friends at Newark that should go into mourning for that $60,000 loss, not me, for I was not at Dover when the bill expired.

SAMUEL TOWNSEND.
Townsend, March 31, 1879.

New Jersey Judges.

TRENTON, N. J., April 1.—General McClellan to-day appointed the following as law judges in the Court of Common Pleas:—Essex county, Ludlow McCarter; Mercer county, John H. Stewart; Monmouth county, Alfred Walling, Jr.; Middlesex county, Andrew K. Cogswell. The State Senate of the Legislature refused to confirm these judges when nominated by the Governor because they are democrats, and they are now appointed to fill vacancies until the next Legislature meets.

The New York Herald publishes a touching street-car romance, to the effect that a young lady of wealth and respectability, named Clara Treadwell, lately became enamored of a street-car driver named Dennis McQuinn. She did not let concealment like a worm get in its work, but boldly told her love and induced Dennis to abandon a former sweet heart and fly with her to Philadelphia, where they were married. The couple now live in the sixty-fourth section of a tumble-down tenement house, but there are rumors that the bride's parents will soon become reconciled and give the couple enough to settle down on a Western farm. The attention of Ex-Governor Hubbard, of course, is respectfully called to the denouement.

A Man Baby.

In the second story of one of the low rickety wooden buildings on the east side of Chatham street in humble apartments, there lives one of the most curious of human monstrosities. It is a boy or man, 21 years and 6 months old, having been born in 1857, that is in all respects physically and mentally, nothing more than an overgrown infant. Its parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Jenn, of 165 Chatham street, industrious French people. The child was born on the 10th of June 1857, and was christened Julo. Up to his eighth month he did not differ from other children; but at that age he was taken sick with measles, and for six months it was thought he could not live, one childish disease following rapidly upon another. His last ailment and the one to which his parents ascribe his deformity, was one that baffled the attending physician, and is described by the father as "the English disease." Both physical and mental growth seemed to be arrested by this disease. The boy is not quite three feet high, but measures four feet around the waist, being inordinately corpulent. His head is well shaped, but looks much too large for his body, being more than two feet in circumference. His hands and feet are exceedingly small, like those of a one year old infant and he weighs 160 pounds. Every effort has been made to educate him, but he is not capable of learning anything. When he was ten years old he was scarcely two feet high, but weighed almost 100 pounds. The boy's skin is remarkable soft and white like a baby's. All his habits are childish, and he can speak only a few words, such as "papa," "mamma," "yes," and "no." His extreme corpulence prevents him from walking but he is very active with his hands and feet. He amuses himself with childish toys, and is very shy when strangers are about. Ex-Police Surgeon Baker who has examined the case very closely for several years, says, it is the most wonderful case he ever heard of. The boy has been examined by a number of scientists who have all come to the conclusion that he is a perfect baby in mind and body. His father has been approached by many showmen, who were anxious to add the boy to their list of attractions; but he has declined every offer, not desiring to have his son exhibited to the public.

Mr. Galusha, a one armed soldier, living near Aurora, Ill., recently found the bones of his lost arm in a Vicksburg, (Miss.) cemetery, where they had been buried after the siege. He identified the lost arm by a ring found on one of the fingers and preserved, the ring being numbered to correspond with the number of the little grave in which nothing but the arm was interred.

Wm. Pitt Kellogg sees the handwriting on the wall and the prospect is that like Nebuchadnezzar he will soon be turned out to grass. Senator Saulsbury's Committee on Privileges and Elections is looking into the matter and will not keep the Senate waiting long for a report.—Balt. Gazette.
