

P. O. S. OF A. SHOWS MEMBERSHIP GAIN DURING THE YEAR

Special to THE EVENING JOURNAL—DOVER, Del., Aug. 22.—The annual encampment of the State Camp of Delaware Patriotic Order Sons of America, will convene at Camden, on next Tuesday. More than 150 delegates and officers are expected to be present. The meeting promises to be one of the most interesting in recent years, because of the lively contest for offices.

The present officers include: John W. Tarbutton, of Leipsic, state president; W. H. B. Maxwell, Wilmington, state vice-president; Thomas F. Dunn, state secretary, Dover, and George E. Auster-muhl, of Wilmington, state treasurer.

The present membership of the order shows 2,000, a large increase over last year's report. The sessions of the state camp will be held in the grange hall, Camden. The delegates and visitors will be met at Wilmington, on Tuesday morning and headed by the file and drum corps, of Washington Camp, No. 8, of Dover, will march to Camden, to Grange Hall. The visitors will be welcomed to the town, after which the business of the state camp will begin.

STEVENS ONE BOSS THAT ALL LOVE

Albert Kuggins, of Philadelphia, delivered an interesting lecture last evening before the Arden Single Tax Club. His subject was "Functions of Government." Mr. Kuggins referred to Frank Stevens as "the Boss of Arden." To know him is to love him," the speaker said. Following the lecture there were several five-minute debates participated in by Dr. E. E. Moore and Arthur Andrews. In the open theatre tomorrow evening the Players' Guild will present "Julius Caesar."

CRAB STARTS BOYS' FIGHT.

Several white and one colored newsboy engaged in a brawl last evening at Sixth and Market streets. The trouble arose after the colored boy announced that he was about to eat a live crab. The white boy was opposed to cannibalism in Wilmington and the fight followed.

AN INCIDENT OF GETTYSBURG

By MARY ELLA MICHENER HOOPES, July, 1913.

Unfurl your flags and raise them high, Honor soldiers who had to die.

At Gettysburg from far and near Many meet again this year.

Where war waged fifty years ago Came the blue and the gray, faces aglow.

One who longed to join the rest Felt the yearning in his breast.

Of transportation he knew not, Therefore he conceived a plot.

To meet his brethren at the camp E'en though he became a tramp.

A soldier of fifty years ago, A veteran of the war, I trow.

Three days along the road he sped, Trusting the country folk for bread.

Learning his mission, they cheered his way, Spread the best that in their larder lay.

Gladly gave him shelter for the night, Hoping thereby to make his journey bright.

As he tramped on day by day, Got a few pence in his pocket lay.

When the tented city he had found, Exhausted he sank upon the ground.

Almost youthful the next day, His sorrows seemed to pass away.

All day long in joy he basked, What more happiness could be asked.

Than to meet with hundreds dear, Comrades not seen for many a year.

But disaster came again, Frantic almost became his brain.

He had wandered from his cot, Left his coat and knew it not.

Papers long which he had cherished, Now he knew that they had perished.

Happy through the day he went, At nightfall could not find his tent.

He tottered, fell, and blankness came, Till the morning light again.

Then fortune spread her wings, you see, Through Lieutenant Lawrence, Com-pany B.

"A bashful, retiring old man," thought he, "He can hardly support himself, I see."

A Southern gentleman, courteous, true, Knowing what was best to do.

With a very gentle mien, Called a physician on the scene.

They both were interested now, The coat to find they both did vow.

But the search was all in vain, They could not find the coat again.

"I hoped you would," he faltering said, "An honorable discharge, my papers read."

Through them I had wished to obtain Transportation home again.

A cherished hope it was to me Through them a pension some time to see."

Now tears ran down each furrowed cheek, His heart was full, he could not speak.

The officer and physician, ashamed to show Their tears were falling, feigned to go.

"Don't worry, Daddy," the physician said, "Now rest yourself upon your bed."

We'll get your transportation home Or we'll pay your way, it will be no loan."

Quiet and child-like in his belief, He knew through them would come re-

HUERTA'S PERSONAL ENVOY KEEPS BUSY AT WASHINGTON

E. DE LA GARZA, JR.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—Enimericus de la Garza, Jr., is the man who represents Huerta in the United States. It was he who met President Wilson and Secretary of State Bryan before the President sent John Lind to Mexico City to confer with Huerta personally. De la Garza attempted to accomplish in Washington on behalf of Huerta what Lind was sent to the Mexican capital to accomplish for President Wilson.

LEAGUE AT RECEPTION.

The informal reception given to the members of the Democratic League, by its officers last evening was a pleasant affair. There were several orchestras and a real Scottish bag piper. Following the entertainment a snapper lunch was served.
