ENGLAND'S WORKINGMEN.

What a Wilmingtonian Saw While on a Summer Visit to England—All England in Favor of the Election of Cleveland, Because It Means Free Trade.

Henry Charles, residing near Delaware avenue and Lincoln street, is an employe of the Augustine paper mills and a native of England. He came to this country more than twenty years ago, and in May last he went over to England to see friends and his native land once more. Mr. Charles returned home from his visit about a week ago. Last evening a representative of the REPUBLICAN called upon him to learn something from him of the temper of the people in England, politically, during the present Presidential campaign in this country, and to learn something of the condition of manufactures and labor in that country as compared with the same in the United States. Mr. Charles regretted very much that he did not know he was to be interviewed upon these matters on his return home. Had he known it, he said, he would have gone to some care and trouble in collecting the information desired.

"Mr. Charles, as a general rule are the manufacturers of England as well off as the manufacturers of the United States?"

"No, I think on the average they are not. They make money slower. If they make 8 or 8 per cent. upon their investments they think they are doing well."

"Are there not in England a great many monopolies, and what in this country are called "trusts."

'Oh, yes; the country is full of them; there are a great many limited partnerships."

"What is the general condition of the working people in England?"

"They are very poor indeed, far behind the condition of the working people in the United States. I came from an English paper, while I was over there, that 90 000 working people had left England in a year and emigrated to other countries. Crowds of poor people are to be found in the country and all the cities outside of London. They troop through the streets, carrying their children with them, and sing from door to door. They are not allowed to beg, and so content themselves with what is voluntarily handed to them."

"The poor working people have no other expectation than to end their days in the poor house, and it is a great relief to many of them to get there."

"Mr. Charles, what is the average wages in England of workingmen?"

"Down in our manual labor is £1 a week, which is equal to $4 88 United States currency. Being a paper maker myself, I noted more particularly the wages of workmen engaged in that industry. They make from 18 to 30 shillings a week, which in our currency is $5 76 to $7 20. The average wages of all adult workmen of whatever trade is $8 a week, women and child labor not included. A good farm hand gets from £20 a year, or $100, divided into $10 or $11 a month for summer and from $5 to $6 for winter. This is considered good wages, as farm labor is scarce. Married farm hands are favored in the way of house rents and gardens, but wages for them are the same."

"Now, Mr. Charles, did it come in your way to note the prices of table living, for you know our Democratic friends are always telling us that the high prices of labor in the United States are offset by the purchasing power of a dollar in England?"

"If I had known I was to be questioned in this manner I would have been prepared with the prices of everything that enters into table living. I do know, however, that ordinary butter costs from 14 to 25 cents a pound; beef, from 14 to 20 cents; pork costs about as much as here, groceries are perhaps a trifle cheaper. Coal, however, is cheaper, being about $3 a ton, the labor for mining it and freightage being much lower than here."

"How about rents for ordinary houses for workingmen, Mr. Charles?"

"Rents for ordinary five or six-roomed houses are about £14 a year, or $67 84, but besides this the tenant has to pay part of the taxes, say £5, or $24 30, which brings the expense of a house up to $92.10. Houses are built more substantial there than here. A double house, with two rooms and a kitchen in each story, calculated for four families, costs about $1,700. This is at New Castle on the Tyne. Each of these land lord's apartments rent for about $64 a year. Houses here are finished with every convenience."

"What is the price of boarding per week for workingmen?"

"Boarding and washing can be had for about 12 shillings a week, or $2.88."

"Do as many workingmen own their own houses there as they do here?"

"It is a very rare exception to find workingmen owning their own houses. They scarcely get enough to procure food and clothing and to pay rent and taxes, without thinking of owning houses."

"As much has been said about the cheapness of clothing in England, can you inform me what a good suit of clothing can be purchased for?"

"Yes, I know something about that, for I purchased a suit when I was over there, including an overcoat, for £8, or about $40. You can get suits, however, much cheaper, and the clothing is somewhat better than American made clothing, but the difference in prices is not great. Hats in England are cheaper than here."

"Can workingmen live comfortably in England upon the wages they get? For instance, how does a man with a wife and five or six children get along on $8 a week?"

"Poor enough, indeed. Recollect that the wife and children do not eat the same kind of victuals the man does who works and makes the living. The man may have a couple of eggs for breakfast, but the children very seldom get any luxuries of that kind. The most rigid economy has to be practiced to make ends meet, and should calamity come and wages stop, the poorhouse is the sure and last resort. It is my candid opinion that the workingmen of America waste by extravagance as much as the workingmen of England was a altogether."

"Well, now, Mr. Charles, if the wealth of England is not in the manufacturers, nor in its working classes, nor in its merchants, where is it?"

"Ah, my dear friend, I will show where it lies by a book I have in stairs. It lies with the titled aristocracy." Saying this Mr. Charles got the book and handed it to us with the request that we look over it and publish from it whatever we saw proper. The pamphlet is a tabulated statement of the holdings and property belonging to the titled nobility and the salaries paid from the Queen down to the humblest cup-bearer. We intend to give some extracts from this book in other articles.

"How do the people there feel and talk in reference to the approaching Presidential contest in this country?"

"Everybody knows that a great election is pending and that they all have more than the usual interest in it. Every man, woman and child of intelligence looks upon Grover Cleveland as the special friend of England. They always quote him as being in favor of free trade, and they are taught that free trade will open up the United States for the admission of English manufactured goods, and this would make better times in England. Yes, if the election was in England, Cleveland would sweep the country. I do not blame the English for this feeling. If I lived there I would be a free trader, and so would you. It is surprising, however, in this country that there are so many who are ready to throw away the advantages we possess and to put our people in the same condition of the working people of England. The English people," Mr. Charles said, "look upon the American people as being extremely selfish in shutting out English products and compelling English manufacturers to manufacture at a low rate and to give low wages in order to compete with the protected industries of the United States." The feeling that times would be better if Cleveland was elected does not only pervade England, but Scotland, which Mr. Charles also visited. He did not visit Ireland, and therefore could say nothing about that country.

Mr. Charles is a conservative gentleman in politics, and is a Republican principally because he believes in protection for this country, however much free trade may suit England. At the same time he thinks the tariff laws should be remodeled, and some of their inequalities abolished. In this sentiment he is in hearty accord with the pronounced Republican sentiment of the times, and with the Finance Committee of the United States Senate that is now maturing a bill for that express purpose.

Murder Added to Arson.

ERIE, Sept. 24.—Late Saturday night a box car filled with baled rags on the Lake Shore Railway was fired by an incendiary. When the firemen had quenched the blaze they discovered that the flames had added murder to their other crime, for in one corner of the burned car lay the half-roasted and charred body of a lad about 11 years old. At noon to-day, as the Coroner was probing the mystery, a young man named Frank Cuppy came forward and testified that he identified the remains as that of Coney Benghart. The witness had parted company with Benghart Saturday night, and, with the remark that his father had driven him out of doors and he must find some place to sleep, Benghart entered the car and the witness closed the car door behind him.

At the inquest the father of Benghart refused to identify the corpse as that of his son, but Benghart's sisters identified him at once. The evidence disclosed the fact that the boy was suffocated and then burned. The railroad authorities testified that a systematic course of incendiarism had been practised upon their rag cars for several weeks in the locality in which the car containing the boy was burned.

Accidental Shot.

Willard, the 15 year-old son of Wm. Smith, residing near McClellandsville, White Clay Creek Hundred, took a gun from the house on Saturday last and, supposing that it was not loaded, took deliberate aim at the colored boy who was approaching, and pulling the trigger, he was badly wounded on the left side near the heart. Dr. Kollock was called in and found the boy in a very precarious condition. Young Smith is greatly prostrated over his criminal carelessness, and would make any proper sacrifice to recall the same. After all that has been said in regard to handling fire arms, it is surprising that persons will continue to do so, and thus bring misery on themselves and the members of their family.

Cattle Dying of Texas Fever.

PITTSBURG, Sept. 24.—Texas fever has appeared among cattle in some sections of Harrison and Fawn Townships, this county, having broken out some days ago. Last September the fever attacked the Western cattle belonging to Bertner Brothers, of Harrison Township, and nine steers died before the disease was checked. Almost exactly one year from the day it broke out last year it made its appearance and again became epidemic with the cattle belonging to Bertner Brothers. On Thursday the last of eight head died. It is reported that stock belonging to other farmers in Fawn Township have the disease. There is some talk of drawing quarantine lines.

LOUISVILLE LETTER.

Knights of Pythias Encampment—Gorgeous Pageants of the Societies of Mercury—Yellow Fever Alarm—Business and Politics.

Correspondence of the REPUBLICAN.

LOUISVILLE, Sept. 23, 1888.—Last week the commencement of the races brought many strangers to Louisville. The city began to put on a holiday appearance; the streets were filled with throngs of country folks; the buildings were decorated with flags and bunting; arches of colored lights spanned the streets at frequent intervals. I have never seen a more effective, liberal and attractive scheme of decoration in any city.

The influx of visitors this week has, however, collpsed that of last. Monday night the hotels were crowded. Tuesday one began to go up. Wednesday every parlor, hall and large space held a dozen cots. Thursday sleeping room could not be got, and the hotels of neighboring towns profited by the overflow.

Louisville was in her glory; such festivities, such celebrations she had never known; her inhabitants were intoxicated with gratification, her citizens surprised at their own ease as and visiting strangers delighted.

Every fall thousands come to the famous Jockey Club Meeting, but this year, in race week, the Uniform Rank of the Knights of Pythias held an encampment here; and on Thursday gave a parade that has never been excelled in Louisville for the "turn out" of a secret society.

The crowning event of the brilliant week was the allegorical pageant of the Satellites of Mercury. This grand affair rivaled the display of the once famous Orioles of Baltimore. While the procession was not as long nor extensive, the display was a fine one, and in no way inferior to the best efforts of Tee Veiled Prophet of St. Louis, or Rex at the Mardi Gras of New Orleans.

As the floats and their attendant torch-bearers passed your correspondent, the sight was most beautiful; the floating plumes of many colors, the waving banners, glittering equipments and gorgeous costumes made, in the glare of the many calcium lights, a picture never to be forgotten.

With all the pleasure of the past week there was a spectre at the feast and the celebration ended; the people stop to consider, and the sweetness of their happiness is as gall when they think of

YELLOW JACK.

The people here are assured, by the board of health, that no possible danger exists, but when every day trains bring dozens of flying residents of towns now under the ban of the fever; when but yesterday over sixty refugees from the infected town of Decatur, Ala., arrived; when the local board believe that no need of a quarantine exists; then people with a touch of green of panic existence to eat with relish, because it impers a healthful appetite; to digest with ease, be sure it strengthens the body and to say all else of the food which is eaten and digested, that benefit ing health, promoting flesh and sustaining the exercise of the physical and mental faculties is, moreover, facilitates the secretion of healthy bile, activates without discomfort the habit of body, and tends, when taken upon retiring, to produce healthy slumber. Malaria is conquered by it.

A Home Warming.

The Institute Hall has been leased by the Prohibition Club for the campaign, and room No. 1 will be used as the headquarters of the Republican State and County Committee. To morrow evening there will be a house warming, at which a number of prominent Republicans of this city will deliver addresses. An invitation is extended to all to attend.

Fotheringham's Case Reopened.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Sept. 24.—Judge Thayer, of the United States Court, rendered his decision to day on the petition of the Southern Express Company for a new trial of the suit in which David Fotheringham was awarded $20,000 damages for false imprisonment. The judge overrules the motion for a new trial on all grounds except the one that the damages assessed were excessive and orders a new trial on that one ground unless Fotheringham consents to a reduction of the award to $12,500. Fotheringham's attorneys say that he will accept the $12,000.

Fotheringham was an express messenger who le. Fred Wiltrock, alias Jim Cummings, into his car and then allowed him to leave again with $70,000 of the company's money about two years ago. Wiltrock and the men with whom he divided the spoils are all in the penitentiary now. The company says that even if Fotheringham does agree to accept $12,000, as recommended by the Court, they will not pay that much and will take an appeal. Judge Laughlin, their attorney, says they might pay as much as $7000, but not more.

City Democratic Association.

The Democratic City Association met in adjourned session at the rooms of the Y. M. D. Club, northeast corner of Seventh and Market streets, last night. An election for officers was held and the following named persons were chosen: President, Patrick Neary; vice president, J. Frank Bal; secretary, William A. McGlosky; treasurer, S. N. Smelts. The rooms of the Y. M. D. C. were selected as headquarters of the association during the campaign. An executive committee of one from each ward was appointed. A committee of three, H. J. Clippen, H. W. McIntyre and S. N. Smeltz, was appointed on naturalization. The regular meeting of the association during the campaign will be on Monday night of each week.

In the City

W. J. Maxwell, formerly a City Councilman from the First ward, afterwards Chief of Police under Mayor A. Imond, and later still assessor for the eastern assessment district, and now a special officer under the post office department, is in the city for a day or two. A prominent Republican politician met him and said to him that he wished he was in the assessor's office again in the eastern district, for in that case there would be a full and honest a sessment. Mr. Maxwell seemed much pleased with the compliment, and said that when he became a sworn officer he was pledged to do his duty, and knew neither a Republican or a Democrat.

Up from its Ashes.

I. T. Quigley's new morocco factory at Fourth and Monroe streets is rapidly arising from the dust and ashes of the burnt building. It will not only be an entire new building, it having been necessary to tear down all the old walls except a part of the south and east wall. The old chimney flue still remains standing above all surrounding objects, and the wonder is how it stands unsupported as it is. Large crowds of people stand around all the time watching the progress of the work. Mr. Quigley expects to occupy his building in about three weeks.

Bad for the Jute Bagging Trust.

NEW YORK, Sept. 24.—A cablegram was received this afternoon at the Cotton Exchange from the Cotton Association of Liverpool, stating that cotton-sheeted bales are considered good delivery there. This is the most powerful blow that has yet been struck at the jute bagging trust. The Board of Managers of the Cotton Exchange in this city resolved some time ago to accept cotton sheeting as a satisfactory wrapper, but the question was not considered settled by any means, as it was necessary to procure the endorsement of the Liverpool buyers.

Would Like to Know.

[COMMUNICATED.]

I would very much like to know if there is anything in the by-laws of the I. O. R. M. to compel them to stay away from their families until 2 A. M. I have frequently observed members of the order scoring for their homes, where they should have been hours before.

A Harrison Medal,

Yesterday while John Brown was repairing an organ he found an old Tippecanoe medal in it, such as was used in the campaign of 1840. On one side is the log cabin, with the barrel of hard cider alongside, while on the other is a profile of General William H. Harrison and the date of his birth.
