In order that the heads of families may be able to judge of the complaints of children, whether they originate from worms or not, we will describe the symptoms by which means it will be easily known.

Itching of the nose and anus; hunger with ravenous appetite; nausea; knowing pain in the stomach or intestines; foetid breath; grinding of the teeth and moaning in sleep; intermitting weak pulse, and hectic fever; faintings; and sometimes convulsion fits; paleness; wasting of the flesh; but there are several kinds of worms; Itching about the anus with tenefusus are signs of ascarides, or small thread worms. Sudden gripings about the navel denote the common round worm. Gnawing pains in the stomach, and voraciousness, the maw worms.
