Why Defame Decency?

Grover Cleveland and Benjamin Harrison are the chief competitors for the Presidency and one of them will be elected. They are both honest, patriotic citizens of whom the country is justly proud, and every honest citizen should resent every attempt of campaign liars or fools to cast a blemish upon their characters.

It is reported from day to day in the campaign that General Harrison publicly declared, during the turbulent railway strikes of 1877 that "$1 a day was enough for workingmen." As General Harrison has never drank and has never been an idiot, of course he never said so. He has never been regarded as especially sympathetic with industrial people, but those who accuse him of making such a declaration must do it in ignorance or with deliberate intent to falsify.

It is repeated from day to day that President Cleveland is for free trade and that he would deprive our home industry of just protection by tariff laws. Those who repeat this falsehood are either to be pitied for their ignorance or shunned for their disregard of truth. The message of the President on the tariff is the strongest and most pointed argument for the protection of the wages of labor that ever emanted from the Executive of the nation, and the tariff revision he favors gives higher protection to labor than was ever before given, except when the necessities of war imposed excessive taxes.

It is repeated from day to day that General Harrison voted and spoke in favor of the free admission of Chinese labor to this country to destroy our home labor. It is not true, and every man of ordinary intelligence knows it to be false. He voted against a Chinese bill because it was in conflict with our treaty obligations, and President Arthur vetoed the bill on the same grounds. Whatever may be his views on Chinese labor, he did not speak or vote for its free admission when in the Senate.

It is repeated every day that President Cleveland took no steps to protect our fisherman in Canadian waters until the Senate rejected the treaty. All who say so, either know that they are untruthful or they are hopelessly ignorant of the facts. As soon as the treaty of 1871 expired, the President began negotiations to settle the dispute of many years by treaty, and he could not resort to retalliation while negotiations were pending. When the Senate refused to accept any treaty, it imposed upon him the duty of retalliation, and he promptly and boldly accepted it, and every intelligent business man heartily thanks him for it. His policy is thoroughly American in labor and in diplomacy and only fools or knaves charge the contrary.

Whether Cleveland or Harrison shall be elected President, the country and the world will sincerely honor the choice of the people and the Republic will live and prosper whether Democrates or Republicans rule. Why defame decent candidates?

Artificial Feeding of Infants.

The principal substitutes for breast-milk are those of the cow and goat. The mixed milk of a dairy is preferable to that of one cow. Cow's milk must be boiled before being used. Condensed milk is not a uniform article, and its use precarious, for that and other reasons. Goat's milk contains too much casein and fat, besides being otherwise incongruous. Skimmed milk, obtained in the usual way, by allowing the cream to rise in the course of time, is objectionable, because such milk is always acidulated. The caseins of cow's and woman's milk differ both chemically and physiologically. The former is less digestible. There ought to be no more than one per cent. of casein in every infant food. Dilution with water alone may appear to be harmless in many instances, for some children thrive on it. More, however, appear only to do so; for increasing weight and obesity are not synonymous with health and strength. A better way to dilute cow's milk, and at the same time to render its casein less liable to coagulate in large lumps, is the addition of decoctions of cereals. It has been stated before that a small amount of starch is digested at the very earliest age. But cereals containing a small percentage of it are to be preferred. Barley and oatmeal have an almost equal chemical composition: but the latter has a greater tendency to loosen the bowels. Thus, where there is a tendency to diarrhœa, barley ought to be preferred; in cases of constipation, oatmeal. The whole barley-corn, ground for the purpose, should be used for small children, because of the protein being mostly contained inside and near the very husk. The newly-born ought to have its boiled milk (sugared and salted) mixed with four or five times its quantity of barley-water; the baby of six months equal parts. Gum arabic and gelatin can also be utilized to advantage in a similar manner. The are not only diluents, but also nutrients under the influence of hydrochloric acid. Thus in acute and debilitating diseases which furnish no, or little, hydrochloric acid in the gastric secretion, a small quantity of the latter must be provided for.

To Philadelphia by Water.

Late trips are now made by the steamer City of Chester and Brandywine, between Philadelphia and Wilmington. The Chester will leave Philadelphia at 6.45 p. m., and the Brandywine will leave Wilmington at the same time. This makes five trips a day each way and an opportunity of spending a long day in Philadelphia, and returning in the cool of the evening.

Vestibuled Trains on the B. & O. R. R.

The first of the Baltimore and Ohio Company's new vestibuled trains has been turned out of Mt. Clare Shops and an experimental trip was made with it August 16th. The train was run from Baltimore to Keyser, 215 miles, in five hours. On the line between Baltimore and Keyser are some of sharpest curves on the B. & O. Road, but notwithstanding the high rate of speed maintained the swaying of the train was scarcely perceptible, the oscillation at the top of the car not exceeding six inches.

This test fully demonstrates what has heretofore been claimed for the vestibule device and that is, that it effectually obviates the swaying motion imparted to a train in rounding curves at high speed. The new train will be immediately placed in regular service between Philadelphia and Chicago.

All other through trains on the B. & O. will be fitted with the vestibule appliance as rapidily as possible, and within the next sixty days it is thought to have the work completed.
