Naval Officer Forecast Role of Air Power in the Far East 20 Years Ago

By Gen. William L. Mitchell, former assistant chief of the Army Air Service staff, and Rear Adm. William F. Follen, U. S. Navy, retired, who supervised together the aerial bombing of obsolete United States warships and the German battleship葡萄田出到日本海的东海岸1933-32。There were avalanche of advances and maneuvers.

A phosphorus bomb striking the forward mast of the U.S.S. Alabama during the bombing demonstrations by the Army Air Service at Hampton Roads, Va., in 1932. The audacious ship was later sunk with air bombs.