Dr. Ballou Honored, 200 Graduated at G. W.·U. Convocation

Approximately 200 students of George Washington University today held diplomas and certificates after a convocation last night in Lisner Auditorium, when the honorary degree of doctor of laws was conferred upon Dr. Frank W. Ballou, retired superintendent of District public schools.

At the same time, Dr. Harry Hampton Donnally became professor emeritus of pediatrics.

In his charge to the graduates Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, university president, said in part:

"I have inquired in governmental chambers, in academic halls, in manufacturing plants and on the corners of Main street, 'what changes will the war bring?' In all the answers the voice of experience is soft and rarely heard. The answers give but one change that will come more quickly because of this war. It is a change in the attitude

"In the tomorrows men shall know that labor and material things are less than human spirit, and that government is less than humanity.

The citation to Dr. Ballou said: "Native of New York, graduate of Teachers College, Columbia University, and subsequently trained at the University of Cincinnati and Harvard University; author, teacher, administrator; serving since 1920 with expertness and devotion the noteworthy education system of the District of Columbia."

Dr. Donnally's citation read: "Accomplished physician, generous and devoted colleague; over many years an effective and untiring teacher who has rendered outstanding serv-
